CENTRAL LABOR UNION DEMANDS QUICK REMOVAL OF EVERETT

The Building Trades Department of the Boston Central Labor Union, at a meeting held last night, unanimously adopted a report of the Board of Governors calling for the immediate removal of Building Commissioner Arthur G. Everett. The adoption of the report makes it a formal resolution. The report follows:

"Public attention now being centred on Arthur G. Everett because of his near-criminal negligence in failing to enforce the laws relating to fire escapes in public buildings, notably in the case of the Revere House, recently destroyed by fire, we wish to enter our empiatic protest against his inefficient methods.

"Not only has Commissioner Everett failed to enforce the law relating to fire escapes, but he has repeatedly refused to enforce still other laws relating to the erection of buildings.

"It is an everyday occurrence to find buildings being erected or rebuilt without the floors being covered, as required by law, for the protection of workmen employed thereon.

"Commissioner Everett, when called upon to enforce this law, invariably refuses to assume the initiative. Instead of himself acting when such complaints are lodged with him, he repeatedly has demanded that we, the representatives of organized labor, swear out warrants against the offending parties.

"In other words, he demands that we do the work that he by law is required to perform while he continues to draw $5,000 a year for doing nothing.

"Because of his non-enforcement of the building laws, coupled with his incompetency, human life is placed in constant jeopardy on the greater number of buildings erected in Boston.

"The fact that a large number of buildings have fallen to the ground while being erected in this city during the four years that he has held office also is due in a large measure to his slothfulness and incompetency.

"We therefore recommend that a practical and reliable building trades mechanic, one who can be depended upon to enforce existing laws, be placed at the head of the Building Commission of this city.

"We further recommend that copies of this report be furnished the press, and that the active co-operation of all law-abiding citizens be sought in an endeavor to secure the prompt dismissal of the present incompetent Building Commissioner of this city."

UNION ASKS FOR REMOVAL OF EVERETT

Protest on the part of Boston citizens against the retention in office of Building Commissioner Arthur G. Everett is daily growing in force. The movement to oust him as incompetent and directly responsible for loss of life and the destruction of property in the city has been indorsed by the Boston Building Trades Council.

Resolutions adopted by this body directly declare that Commissioner Everett does not enforce the laws nor prosecute violations. It is also stated by members of the Building Trades Council that Mr. Everett, upon receiving complaints of violations of the law, invariably suggests that the complainant take out a warrant, thus evading his duty to have such complaints investigated by his department.

The appeal to Mayor Fitzgerald to oust Mr. Everett, who is responsible for the loss of life at the Revere House fire; for the fatal North End building collapse; for the failure to see that fire escapes are on several Boston hotels; and who failed to inspect the hotels at all in 1911, has been joined in by real estate men, builders and hundreds of others interested in the welfare of Boston.

Councillor Curley's Charge.

Councillor Curley points out that Mr. Everett is not only inefficient and unfit for the duties of his office, but that men in his employ are directly interested in side lines of building construction which prejudices them in their duty and often allows slipshod construction to get by when their own pet devices are installed.

The AMERICAN has called the attention of Mayor Fitzgerald in a letter to the fact that Commissioner Everett has demanded that the AMERICAN rearrange its fire escapes and means of egress because the AMERICAN dared to point out the menace to life that exists in the present building department.

It was after the AMERICAN had called attention to the inefficiency of the building department in connection with the Revere House fire that Building Inspector Thomas McCullough, last Monday, called at the AMERICAN office and said:

"When I reached the office this morning my boss, John H. Mahoney, said to me: 'The first job I want you to tackle to-day is the AMERICAN.'"

Remarkable Confession.

Mr. Everett's amazing activity in regard to the fire escapes at the AMERICAN office follows the call of an AMERICAN reporter at the office of the building commissioner last Monday. Mr. Everett, whose office hours are supposed to be from 9 to 5, arrived at 9.30 and found the reporter waiting.

In the course of the conversation the building commissioner made a remarkable confession as to the laxity of the conduct of his office. He admitted that he had inspected the Revere House only after the fire, that people were supposed to ascend the fire escapes there and not seek safety by descending them, and that the inspection of Boston hotels last year was a farce.

Now, although he has been at the head of the building department for four years, Mr. Everett has just discovered that he has something to criticise about the fire escapes at the AMERICAN office.

Curley's Opinion.

Following Councillor Curley's opinion as expressed at a meeting of the City Council:

I desire to say that I do not question the honesty of the Commissioner of the Building Department, Mr. Everett, but I believe that if Mr. Everett really desires to be of service to the citizens in the capacity of Building Commissioner it would be advisable for him to have his eyes tested.

It is common knowledge that defective gas fixtures have been improved in various sections of the city by the inspecting force of the Building Department, and in many cases, in consequence of those defective fixtures, have resulted from gas poisoning.

It is common knowledge that some of the men employed as inspectors in the Building Department are interested in various mechanical devices connected with the gas fitting and plumbing trade.

WILSON MEETS GOVERNOR FOSS AT STATE HOUSE

Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey arrived in Boston early to-day and proceeded directly to the Hotel Somerset. He was entertained from 12 until 2 o'clock by the City Club at luncheon. From there he went to Cambridge and at 2.30 o'clock addressed the Harvard students in Sanders Theatre, being the guest of the Democratic Club and the Harvard Woodrow Wilson Club.

This evening he, together with Governor Foss, former Governors John L. Bates and John D. Long, Colonel W. A. Gaston and General Hugh Bancroft, chairman of the directors of the Port of Boston, will speak at the annual dinner of the Real Estate Exchange at the Hotel Somerset.

Governor Wilson will leave Boston tonight on the midnight train for New York.

Visits State House.

Governor Wilson, accompanied by Walter Lessley, his secretary; Dana Field Malone, assistant corporation counsel of New York, and a son-in-law of United States Senator O'Gorman of New York, and Henry Morgenthal of the New York Real Estate Exchange, arrived at the State House at 11.10.

They were escorted to Governor Foss' office. Governor Wilson and Governor Foss shook hands, after which Governor Wilson introduced the members of his party to Governor Foss. The party then adjourned to the Governor's room.

Governor Foss said: "You will excuse the condition of my room. It is undergoing alterations."

Governor Wilson said: "All the more business-like."

After two minutes' private conversation, Governor Foss put on his hat and coat, and taking Governor Wilson by the arm, showed him around the State House, passing first through the Hall of Flags. The party stopped in front of a life-sized painting of Abraham Lincoln in the executive chamber and also paused in front of the statue of Governor Andrew, Massachusetts' War Governor, in the Hall of Statues.

This is the first time within the memory of the oldest habitues of the State House that a governor has come and has acted as a guide in the State House.

After being shown around the building, the two Governors proceeded to the front steps of the State House on Beacon street

POLICEMAN ACTS AS AN INTERPRETER

Patrolman Alfred Barcher in the Dorchester Court appeared as an interpreter in a case against Joseph Mostro, a Portuguese, who was arrested for vagrancy. When Mostro was arraigned before Magistrate Churchill no one present could understand the language he spoke until Barcher appeared. On several other occasions he has helped the court by his knowledge of foreign languages. Mostro was given an indefinite time at the State Farm.

SHIP BATTLES GALES ON CALCUTTA TRIP

The British steamer Hylas, Captain Samuels, has arrived from Calcutta, after battling with a series of gales. On January 9 Charles Peterson was washed by a big wave and seriously injured. The steamship was badly smashed fore and aft on the deck were stove in. The Hylas has 8,000 tons of cargo aboard, part of which will be discharged here and the remaining portion to be sent on to New York.

IDENTIFIES HOSPITAL PATIENT AS MOTHER

The woman who was taken from the City square elevated station Thursday evening in a state of collapse and placed on the dangerous list at the Relief Station, was identified to-day as Mrs. Elizabeth Cahill of Florence street, Roslindale. The identification was made by her daughter Elizabeth. Mrs. Cahill is still on the dangerous list at the Relief Hospital.

FINAL HONORS FOR FR. HARKINS

LOWELL, Jan. 27.—The funeral of the Rev. John J. Harkins, pastor of St. Margaret's Catholic Church, took place today.

When the solemn high mass of requiem began at 10 o'clock the church was packed and the crowd extended out to the street.

The Rev. John J. Shaw, pastor of St. Michael's Church, Lowell, was celebrant of the mass; the Rev. M. O. Gilbride of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, deacon; the Rev. Father Linehan of Brighton, subdeacon; the Rev. W. George Mullen of St. Peter's Church, this city, and the Rev. C. Reardon of St. Margaret's, masters of ceremonies.

Bishop Joseph G. Anderson of Boston, Bishop George A. Guertin of Manchester, Bishop Louis S. Walsh of Portland and about forty priests were seated within the sanctuary. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Francis C. Maley of St. Augustine's, South Boston.

At the conclusion of the mass, a procession composed of members of St. Margaret's parish, delegations from Councils of the Knights of Columbus, Hibernians and of the Holy Name Societies from the Catholic Churches of Lowell escorted the body to the railroad station where it was placed on the 4.30 o'clock train for Boston.

The active pallbearers were the Rev. John Rourke of St. Vincent's, South Boston; Louis of St. Vincent's, South Boston; the Rev. Florence Hurley of Immaculate Conception Meeting House Hill; the Rev. Timothy Mahoney of St. Monica's, South Boston, the Rev. M. C. Gilbridge of St. Augustine's, South Boston, and the Rev. James McCarthy of St. William's, Dorchester, all classmates of the deceased.

Interment was at Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline.

ALIEN SEAMEN MAY LOAD SHIPS

United States District Attorney Asa P. French gives out an opinion that alien seamen may land on American docks to load and unload vessels without violating the contract labor law, as no provision exists, he holds, in the present immigration laws forbidding the landing of alien sailors for this purpose.

This opinion is one of the most important affecting labor that has been handed down in many years, and if it is upheld by the courts will mean the complete reversal of the present ruling enforced in all American ports, which permits aliens sailors to unload vessels only in cases of emergency.

The opinion was contained in a letter received by the Longshoremen's Union Council, and was read at a meeting held in Rowman Hall. The letter was a reply to a protest on the part of the officials of the Longshoremen, sent to the Immigration authorities and to District Attorney French against the landing on American soil of alien sailors to work on vessels.

The Longshoremen maintained that this was in direct violation of the spirit and the letter of the law which forbids the importation of contract labor into this country.

"I am satisfied that no valid or rational arguments can be advanced to support the contention that the landing of aliens in cargoes, including the work done upon the vessels and the work done upon the deck, is not 'employ of the vessel' within the meaning of section 3.

"To state my position briefly in another form, I am confident that there is no provision in the United States immigration laws which prevents American labor against the employment of alien seamen to do all the work incident to the unloading or loading of the cargoes of vessels by their crews."

BUTTER WEIGHT CHEATS PUBLIC

The people of Boston are being cheated out of 10 per cent. of the butter they pay for, according to the State Department of Weights and Measures, which has just completed a special investigation in Massachusetts.

The report says:

"It was found to be the practice of many retail dealers to include the weight of the tray, container or wrappers with the butter, charging for the same at the goods' price per pound. In some instances a heavy tray was used, and in others two wrappers, a heavy parchment paper and a thick manila paper. These articles weighed from one to one and one-half ounces, and resulted in a shortage of the goods sold of from 6 to 10 per cent."

Commissioner of Weights and Measures Daniel C. Palmer's name is signed to the report. He urges the public to ascertain if they are given correct weight in the purchase of butter and other commodities, and asks the press to assist in warning the public of existing conditions.

The investigation was made as a result of the high price of butter.

"As many of the butter stores average over 200 sales daily," says the report, "the gain to the dealer who uses this method of weighing would amount to from $40 to $50 weekly. As it was found that this practice existed in many sections of the State, and that it was constantly increasing, a general warning has been given, and several of the worst offenders have been brought to the attention of the courts."

MILL STRIKERS AT LAWRENCE TO FIGHT TO FINISH

LAWRENCE, Jan. 27.—The breach between the strikers and mill men was split farther open to-day than ever. The strikers' committee of forty-eight voted to-day not to meet the mill men any more, to fight the strike to a finish, to appeal to Governor Foss and the Legislature for an investigation of the strike, and to agitate a sympathetic strike at the Puritan mills of the American Woolen Company at Plymouth.

STRIKE LEADER ETTOR MAKES FIERY SPEECH.

Joseph J. Ettor, the strike leader, addressed the committee in a fiery speech—one of the most radical he has delivered here. He cited the French revolution, saying:

"During the French revolution the workers were taunted by the masters when they cried for bread with the remark, 'Why don't you eat cake?' and then they were taunted with 'Go and eat grass.' That's what the masters said. But a few thousands of those masters were strung up to the lamp-posts and wisps of grass were tied to their mouths."

Ettor told the committee not to be frightened by militia, soldiers or firemen. He shouted: "I think we will keep the gun shops busy selling firearms. I'm going to buy one myself."

The strike committee cheered Ettor to the echo.

Committee Sees Wood.

The meeting of the strike committee of forty-eight was held at the strike headquarters on Common street, beginning at 10:30.

Ettor presided. The committee of ten which waited on President Wood and the directors of the American Woolen Company in Boston last night reported that President Wood would not agree to the strikers' demands, but asked them to moderate their demands and go back to work.

The committee reported that Wood asked them to trust him.

After an hour's discussion the committee voted unanimously not to moderate any demands.

They voted to hold no more conference with the mill agents until, as the motion read: "The mill men come down to business."

Statement to Public.

A committee of three was appointed to prepare a statement to the public of the conference between the sub-committee of the strikers and the mill men last night, and to ask Governor Foss and the Legislature to make an investigation into all conditions surrounding the strike.

A committee was appointed to go to Plymouth to begin agitation of a strike among the 700 employes at the Puritan mills of the American Woolen Company in that town.

A committee was appointed to visit Boston and Lawrence to collect funds.

After these things were done Chairman Ettor rose, and with impassioned oratory said:

"Truce Is Off," Ettor Cries.

"From now out there is no peace. The truce is off. You must gird yourselves for a long struggle.

"It may be that the wolf will knock at your door but better go hungry than be slaves of the masters.

"The masters say that they are surprised that you are eating black bread.

"During the French Revolution the

DALY ACCUSES FITZGERALD

Charles D. Daly to-day accused Mayor Fitzgerald of making "deliberate misstatements" in regard to Daly's orders removal from his $5,000 job as Fire Commissioner.

Mr. Daly also said he is "not worrying."

The ex-fire commissioner was busy early to-day at his home, No. 107 Academy Hill road, Brighton. He was taking matters easily. In fact, he was in bed. He gave the following brief statement over his signature:

Daly's Statement.

The statement from the Mayor's office, with respect to my removal, contains deliberate misstatements of facts and is calculated to deceive.

CHARLES D. DALY.

Then he added:

"I will not, either directly or indirectly, seek the office and will not even allow my friends to appear before the Civil Service Commissioners in my behalf."

The greatest shakeup the Boston Fire Department has ever experienced was predicted by politicians following Mayor Fitzgerald's removal of Daly. Daly as fire commissioner and the naming of Street Commissioner John H. Dunn as acting commissioner.

The retirement of Chief John A. Mullen and the advancement of Deputy Chief John Grady, District Chief John T. Byrnes of the Seventh Battalion, or Junior Deputy Chief Peter McDonough to chief is expected to be one of the first moves under the new regime. An addition a large number of transfers and promotions are looked for.

Mayor Appoints Cole.

To-day Mayor Fitzgerald sent to the Civil Service Commissioners for their approval, papers appointing Former Police Commissioner Charles H. Cole as fire commissioner.

The removal of Daly caused little surprise at City Hall, for it was a matter of common knowledge that he and the Mayor had been at loggerheads since last Summer over the question of appointing fifty additional men to the department.

Chairman John A. Sullivan of the Finance Commission expressed surprise at the Mayor's action.

"Mr. Daly," he said to-day, "has made an excellent commissioner in all respects. He has been clean, upright, able and honest."

workers were taunted by the masters when they cried for bread with the remark: 'Why don't you eat cake' and then they were taunted with: 'Go eat grass.'

"That's what the masters said. But a few thousands of these masters were strung up to lampposts of Paris and wisps of grass were tied to their mouths.

"Now get ready for a long struggle. Don't be frightened by the soldiers with their bayonets, the policemen with their clubs or the firemen with their hose.

"We are going to win this fight. They are arming scabs with revolvers. There has been a wholesale issuing of permits by the police to citizens to carry pistols. I think we will keep the gunshops busy selling firearms. I'm going to buy one myself. I have been informed from a reliable source that Governor Foss intends to put the town under martial law. Let them do it. We will not be intimidated. Let them drag out any brand of law they have in their law shop.

"The fight is on, and just stand together! Stand together and we win."

To Reduce Military Force.

Colonel E. Leroy Sweetser, commander of the troops doing strike duty in this city, to-day declared that there would be a reduction in the military forces, in all probability, within the next twenty-four hours.

"As the situation looks now," he declared, "I think I will be able to get along with three or four companies less."

At present twelve companies have been quartered in the city to protect the mills. They include companies from the Sixth, Eight and Ninth regiments and from Battery A.

Referring to the possibility of a reduction in the troops at Lawrence, Colonel Sweetser to-day made the following statement to an AMERICAN reporter:

"I will get in touch during the day with the adjutant-general and will suggest that some of the companies be relieved. No move of the troops will be made until to-morrow. I will not decide until to-night whether some of the companies will be taken from duty altogether or relieved by other companies.

"It has been a hard siege on the men, who have been on night and day in all kinds of weather, and it is only proper that they should be relieved by new men. As the situation looks now, I think I will be able to get along with three or four companies less."

Cases of destitution and suffering continue to come to the attention of the city authorities.

Rev. Chas. Carter, city missionary, today called at the meeting of the strike committee and informed Leader Ettor that the association which he represented would gladly co-operate with the city authorities and the strike committee to relieve all cases of destitution among the strikers.

The mill officials were again informed concerning the demands of the strikers, which are a 15 per cent. wage advance, abolition of the "premium" system on work, which gives a bonus to the most efficient workers, double pay for overtime and reinstatement of the strikers.

F. A. B. Gardon, special agent of the Immigration Bureau, who has been in this city during the past ten days seeking evidence of violations of the alien law by the mill agents, to-day declared that so far his investigations have disclosed none.

Continue Investigattion.

Gordon said that the strike committee had failed to furnish him with any evidence showing that there had been any violation of the alien law which it declared was in its possession. Gordon states that he will continue his investigation several days longer.

The State police renewed vigorously in Lawrence to-day their search for the men who "planted" sticks of dynamite in an endeavor to intimidate the strikers.

Now that the Lawrence strikers have been exonerated from all connection with this "planting" of dynamite, attention is being directed toward those who were opposed to the strike in sympathy with the mill owners and the officials.

The strike situation, from the strikers' point of view, was graphically upheld at a mass meeting in Faneuil Hall by Joseph J. Ettor, the strike leader, representing the Industrial Workers of the World. Three thousand men and women packed the historic auditorium and applauded the impassioned oratory of Mr. Ettor. Among the vigorous statements by Ettor uttered each one was:

"President Wood asserts that, while 1 represent 25,000 strikers, he represents 14,000 stockholders, some of whom live as far away as the Riviera. You bet!

"The mill owners appealed to the law and to the courts for shedding of a cartridge.

"They thought the workers would be content to weave their lives into cloth.

"The strike is won.

"The only danger we fear is hunger."

A second conference between a strike committee, composed by Ettor on one side, and President Wood and other officials of the American Woolen Company on the other is expected to-day.

Meanwhile investigation of the strike was continued at Lawrence to-day by the subcommittee of the Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives. This committee questioned strikers in detail.

Suffer From Cold.

The strike is taking hold with bitter grip on the operatives. Desperately poor under the most favorable working conditions, they are being reduced to want. This is shown by the lengthening lines at the soup kitchens. That it is showing in pitifully pitiful way by the falling off in attendance at Lawrence public schools. Lack of food and proper clothing keep the younger children out of school. More and more applications are made for city aid. The stockholders of the mills may be inconvenienced later by reduction or passing of dividends. But the strikers, lacking their wage envelopes, however meagre, are suffering from cold and ill nourishment.

Rising cold to-day kept most of the strikers at home, huddled about tiny stoves in an effort at comfort. The streets were practically deserted, compared to the crowded conditions when navy prevailed. There were slight accessions to the forces at work in the different mills, but none of importance, and the situation remains practically the same.

The conference held between Ettor and William M. Wood is looked upon as a hopeful sign by the leaders among the strikers. It is felt that substantial progress has been made, and hopes for a settlement are felt everywhere.

The Parker Mills in Plymouth, where an attempt is to be made to bring about a strike, are one of the thirty odd mills of the American Woolen Company, under the head of President William M. Wood, Otis Wood, a brother of President Wood, is the agent in charge.

The mills manufacture fancy goods for dress and clothing purposes, and are one of the best equipped of all the Wood mills. A strike called there, it is felt, would be a crippling blow and would open the way for a statewide fight between the mill operatives and the millmen.

Unless the mill-owners here consent very soon to yield in full to the demands of the strikers, a general strike may be declared in all the textile mills of New England. Operatives, in their dissatisfaction over conditions in other cities, are pleading with Strike Leaders Ettor and Haywood to order a general rebellion.

No less an authority than William H. Haywood is sponsor for this statement, which shows how acute the industrial tangle in Lawrence is at the beginning of the third week of the tie-up.

Meanwhile the owners and agents of the mills in the strike are resting on their arms, without breaking the ranks, and their plans for the future, confident, as several of prominence said they were, that the backbone of the strike will soon be broken by the strikers themselves, without further coaxing or overture.

No Deserters in Ranks.

The mill managers say many of the operatives are only too anxious to resume their positions under present conditions. They report that quite a few abandoned the striking column yesterday, and predict that so many will go back to work Monday that it promises to be the crucial day.

But Ettor and Haywood scoff at the growing rumors of dissention in the strikers' ranks, and refute the charge by referring to the letters which are received upon them from other industrial centres in New England where mills are closed. They say, are undergoing conditions equally miserable.

"All that is needed is the signal," said Leader Haywood to-day. "We would have similar strikes in all the mill cities in New England in the drop of a hat.

"You ought to see the letters we are getting every day. Workers in mills are lashed and chained and underpaid in other cities besides Lawrence, as we told the Legislative Committee.

SONG OF THE STRIKERS.

To-morrow the following strike song, "Unity Wins," will be distributed among the strikers:

You, men of toil, rise and be free.
Starvation wages bid you rise;
Stand, brother, for right and liberty,
Stand for life and all kindred ties;
Stand for life and all that it implies,
Be not yield to the tyrants binding,
Banish fear, join hands in unity,
Defiance hurl at their combining,
While justice seeks on to ascending.

CHORUS.

Protect your homes from the tyrant's binding,
Unyielding, let us stand,
Till right and justice, banish for ship,
Stand firm, let this be our command,
Stand firm, let this be our command.

By masters proud we're duly hounded,
A pittance only do we earn;
For this 'tis bid us be confounded,
Where free the starry banners wave,
Where men may live in freedom's name,
To order and be free,
They send us to increase their store,
And for the bitterness of poverty,
While freedom's flag is ever us waving.

Black-listing Methods at Mills Told by Ettor

Joseph J. Ettor, addressing the mass meeting for the strikers at Faneuil Hall, startled his hearers by telling of the "blank-listing" methods of the mill owners. He said:

"Nothing, if a man ventured to protest, he was told if he didn't like it he could 'get out.' And if he got out, God help him. The black list was applied so that if he ever wanted employment Elsewhere he had to change his name.

"This time," he added, "it was a case of putting 25,000 men on the shelf, but the shelf wouldn't stand the strain. It broke down. Then they called in the police and the firemen, and finally the militia. They wanted the firemen to put out the fire—the fire of the working class rebellion—a fire more dangerous to the capitalist class than the fire that burns wood.

WHITMAN ASKS BRANDT PARDON

NEW YORK Jan. 27.—Folke E. Brandt, the handsome young Scandinavian valet to Mortimer L. Schiff, who asked a pardon or commutation of sentence from Governor Dix on the ground that he was "jobbed" into a thirty-year sentence for a "burglary" in the millionaire's house, will go free if the recommendation of District Attorney Whitman has any influence upon the chief executive at Albany.

Mr. Whitman will present his report on the case to Governor Dix on Monday. While the District Attorney himself would say no more than this, the AMERICAN learned that the report will recommend a full pardon.

Mr. Whitman, it was ascertained positively, is convinced that Brandt's story of the circumstances under which he was arrested and sent to prison for thirty years is true.

Therefore, according to persons close to him, the District Attorney will suggest the pardon on the following grounds:

That Brandt did not enter the Fifth avenue home of Mr. and Mrs. Schiff, in March, 1907, with an intent to rob, but went there on the invitation of a member of the household.

That his entry was not burglarious, but that he went through the front door with a key given to him by this member of the household; and that, when Mr. Schiff unexpectedly entered the house, Brandt suddenly seized several stickpins and assaulted the millionaire purposely to make himself appear a thief, in order that the other person might be shielded.

Brandt's Story Verified.

That Brandt, with this idea of chivalry, calmly confessed himself guilty and accepted his long sentence—but with the assurance of representatives of the millionaire's family that he would be liberated in a year.

District Attorney Whitman's private investigation followed the first according to the AMERICAN'S informants—that Brandt partially told the same story two days after he was sentenced that he told to Governor Dix in his application for pardon. Then, three years ago, he wrote the same story identically to certain United States Senator (not of New York State), and asked for his aid.

The person who learned of Brandt's conviction was Carl Fischer Hansen, an attorney. Hansen admitted this to an AMERICAN reporter As to the Senator, it is known that Mr. Whitman has been in communication with him and has received his report on the matter.

A certain letter—which Brandt speaks of in his application for a pardon, and which has been occasionally referred to in the papers—is the only point, it is said, in the young man's favor.

DRUG FIENDS

More Than a Million in U. S.

According to a report recently issued by order of Dr. Wiley, of "pure food" fame, there are between one million and four million victims of the drug habit in the United States.

Most of these were influenced to the use of drugs through over-indulgence in proprietary medicines and "remedies" containing opium, cocaine, caffeine and like insidious elements. The unprincipled advertisers of consumption cures and cough syrups have been most industrious in this nefarious traffic.

Never use drugs for a cold. Half an ounce of virgin oil of pine, mixed with two ounces of glycerine and half a pint of pure whiskey, is recommended by health authorities as the quickest and most effective cough remedy.

Oil of pine is prepared, in its purest form, by the Leach Chemical Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and may be had at any drug store. It can be mixed at home, and is absolutely safe and free from the dangers that attend the use of drugs.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

BOSTON WOMEN IN GAMING WAR

NEWPORT, Jan. 27.—Two Boston women, Miss Ellen F. Mason, president of the Newport Civic League, and her sister, Miss Ida Mason, who have a Summer home here, are largely responsible for the uplift movement in Newport.

Reports that sky people are paying the expenses for the survey of Newport are incorrect, said a member of the general committee.

Prominent men of the Summer colony are behind the work, lending financial and moral support to the task of cleaning up Newport.

It is intimated that there need be no fear that the attempt to close gambling and other resorts will be only half done.

If an attempt is made to put any gambling resort to open for business, or life is seen about these places, steps toward closing them will be pressed immediately. These resorts will be kept under surveillance.

Newport has had many dances where the "turkey trot," grizzly bear" and other such dances were allowed. These have been investigated by the authorities, sale of liquor in places, licensed and unlicensed, which young women frequent will soon be occupying the attention of the Governor, and some of the unlicensed places have been closed.

WIFE IS REAL GIBSON BEAUTY

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—"Name the ten most beautiful women in the world? Impossible! I haven't the courage. And I have seen some of the best, too. Women, however, are all beautiful.

"There is one woman whom I know to be truly beautiful, and whom I do not fear to name. Who is she? Why, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, of course."

So said Charles Dana Gibson, the artist, when asked to name the ten women he believed to be the most beautiful in the world.

Mr. Gibson was found in his studio, surrounded by the features on canvas and paper of many beautiful women. He would not discuss these, however. He said he was willing to select ten from that world, but added that so far as he can see all women are beautiful.

All Women Beautiful.

"I dare not name the ten most beautiful," said Mr. Gibson. "It is beyond me to do such a thing. There are about 45,000,000 beautiful women in the world, and were I to select ten from that number and declare them to be the most beautiful, it would bring the remaining 44,999,990 down on me. Can you not picture what a calamity that would be?' and Mr. Gibson threw up his hands with an expression of horror.

"As I said, all women are beautiful. At least, they think they are. If you don't believe me, ask them. They will tell you that they are.

"Of course, their intimates in their particular social circle may not think so. They would probably have another story to tell. So, I could not name the ten most beautiful. I am a rank coward.

"I can, however, name one whom I know to be beautiful. She is Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson. Why do I name her and no other? Simply because it puts me right at home. Also, if I am in right at home, I am as a consequence in right with half of the other 44,999,900 beautiful women of the world."

Mr. Gibson laughed lightly.

Not All on the Stage.

"Why, think of it," he said. "One of the ten may have been the woman who sat next to me in a horse car the other day, with a bundle wrapped in newspaper in her lap. She was beautiful. There was no doubt about that. Her clothes may not have been, but she was.

"On the other hand, one of the ten may have been the little fur-clad thing who sat opposite me in the subway the other night, squeezed between two stout gentlemen who were trying to monopolize three seats. She looked really beautiful when she cast them a scornful glance and swept from the car at the next station.

"You may see beautiful women any place you go. On the street, at the theatre, in the shops, in offices, in the home. In the lodgerooms everywhere. One could I hope to select ten women and name them as the most beautiful.

"So you think that most of the beautiful women are on the stage?" was asked.

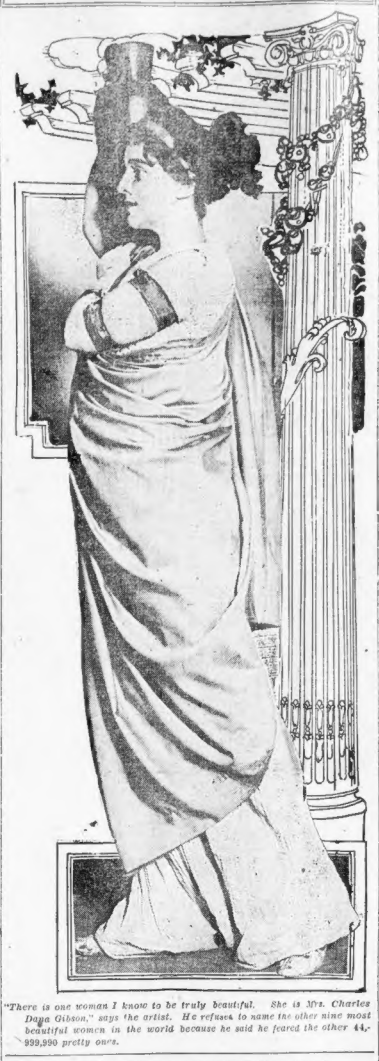
"Great heavens!" grasped the artist. "No. Quite the contrary. The percentage leans the other way. I have seen a far greater percentage of beautiful women off the stage than I have on. I don't want any one to think that I mean there are no beautiful women on the stage. There are many of them.

There's a Difference.

"But figuring percentages, there are more beautiful women among the general public than there are on the stage. One reason for the belief that so many actresses are beautiful is that they do not appear as their natural selves on the stage. They appear in different clothes, different characters, and, in addition, are made up and surrounded with all the glamor of the stage.

"On the street they may be very different. The man who admires the beauty of some actress from the orchestra or from a box might be very surprised to see that same woman as she leaves the stage entrance."

Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Who Heads Husband's Beauty List



"There is one woman I know to be truly beautiful. She is Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson," says the artist. He refuses to name the other nine most beautiful women in the world because he said he feared the other 44,999,990 pretty ones.

QUICK PROFIT ON STRANDED FREIGHTER

ROCKLAND, Me., Jan. 27.—The stranded freight steamship Caroga, which was bought at auction for $450 Thursday by Charles E. Bicknell of this city, was purchased from him to-day by Capt. Perry Baxter, Deen Company of Portland. The terms were not made public, but it is understood that Mr. Bicknell's 24-hour ownership of the craft will net him nearly $7,000 on the bill alone. The salvage of the cargo began in earnest to-day, when 5,000 bushels of Aroostook potatoes and 100 bales of paper were taken from the hold.

RHEUMATISM

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It.

In the spring of 1903 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy and doctor after doctor, but got no relief. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatism to write me for a free sample of this prescription. It will prove its merit. Send no money, name and address and I will send it free to try. If after you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your rheumatism, you may send me one of it one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are entirely satisfied to send it. Don't buy liniments, etc., to rub or drug to take. Write to-day and accept what is positive relief in time for it to effect a permanent cure. Don't delay.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, vitality, weakness in any of its elements, that has cured so many weak and nervous men right in their own homes, after everything else had failed, that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power, and who has ambition enough, should have a copy. I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope to every man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has studied especially this subject, and I am confident it is the most powerful restorative, upbuilder and invigorator of physical deficiencies and vitality ever put together.

I think I owe it to my fellow-men to send them a copy in confidence, so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop dragging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure this prescription, use it privately in his own home, and be quickly restored to health and strength. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. R. Sproule, 1058 Sproule Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of the prescription free. BOSTON DEBUT BY MARCOUX

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Vanni Marcoux, the French bass, whose Golaud in "Pelleas et Melisande" created a sensation, was heard last night in the great swinging part of Mephistopheles in "Faust."

His debut was the feature of an opera in which the other principals have all appeared several times.

In "Pelleas et Melisande" Marcoux appeared to save an extraordinarily fine bass voice. But it doesn't follow that a voice which seems excellent in that peculiar opera is going to sound as well when found in a more melodious work.

Frankly, Marcoux is not a wonderful bass singer. His voice is harsh, uneven and in many registers unpleasant. But he deserves unqualified admiration for what he does with that voice, and too much praise cannot be given his interpretation of Mephistopheles.

He is utterly and completely unconventional. He has authority and vitality that is magnificent. He was supreme during every moment he occupied the stage, and was in truth the director of the destinies of all in the opera. His Mephistopheles is a cruel fiend, a true enemy of mankind, not the jovial devil so many bosses affect.

His facial appearance was positively startling in his green and black garb, for he has discarded the scarlet of the conventional opera devil. His facial expression was frequently terrible and his gestures always thrilling and true.

He can put over a song, too, in splendid style, and for the whole we must admit a man who can vitalize a warmed-over role is a faded opera is worth saving in our opera house.

Zenatello sang with good taste and fine tonal quality. Bronte made a pleasing Margarite. Didur, for the same reason did not sing his Kirmesse scene arta, was an adequate Valentine, and the ballets in the cast were sufficient.

Mr. Dippel himself is evidently inspired by his new Mephistopheles to conduct a brilliant orchestral performance.

Every reader of to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN will receive FREE (for the coupon) a splendid portrait, 16 by 22 inches in size, of His Eminence, CARDINAL O'CONNELL, printed on fine art paper with duo colored ink, suitable for framing.

BURTON HOLMES TALKS ON ARGENTINE CITY

The beauties of Buenos Ayres were exploited at Tremont Temple when Burton Holmes delivered one of his travelogues in his usual interesting manner. The magnificent buildings which stretch for twelve miles inland from the ocean showed what remarkable progress has been made on the South American continent. Mr. Holmes said the inclination was to spend large sums in public buildings where a population does not warrant such large expenditures. A wedding was shown and portrayed by motion pictures and was greatly enjoyed, especially by the women in the audience, as a good view was obtained of the style of dress of society in the South American city. Motion pictures which followed that of the wedding showed the duties of the Gaucho cowpunchers of the Pampa and their sweethearts. Another picture was the burning of the custom warehouse, which were taken by the light of the fire, were a distinct novelty.

AND NOW THE STYLES MUST COME FROM INDIA. "It would only to be expected," Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile") writes in the Sunday AMERICAN, "that women's fashions would respond to the Durbar influence, especially that of the recent great Indian pageantry and pageant." Some of the better styles that have come over are fully described in detail in Lady Duff-Gordon's article in the Sunday AMERICAN.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE CLAIMS AWARD

Mrs. James Garceaux is a contestant for the AMERICAN'S leap year prize of $25. She came to the AMERICAN office with her marriage certificate and now all the bashful girls that have had this matter under consideration will have to come to the front and make similar claims to the Leap Year Editor and meet the conditions of the leap year contest or lose to Mrs. Garceaux.

The happy bride before her marriage on January 20 was Miss Florence V. Campbell of Montreal, and has recently come to this city. She isn't afraid to admit that she really proposed to her husband or to tell her age. "I'm twenty-eight and my husband is thirty," said Mrs. Garceaux.

"We were married on January 20 by George M. Young, a justice of the peace at No. 1021 Washington street, a week after James got out the license."

How She Proposed.

After a pause, Mrs. Garceaux said: "Well, I suppose you want to hear how I came to propose."

With a ripple of laughter she continued: "I first met my husband in a Chicago theatre on the evening of Thanksgiving Day, and I fell in love with him on the spot.

"We were introduced and saw a lot of each other for a few days, as he was stopping in the city on business, and I was visiting some friends there.

"Shortly afterwards, I went to Montreal on a visit, and Mr. Garceaux remained in Chicago attending to business there. His folks own a big ranch out in Wyoming. About a month ago I came from Montreal to Boston. Mr. Garceaux was in the city.

"I read the offer of the AMERICAN to give $25 to the first couple married as the result of a Leap Year proposal by the young woman. I talked it over with friends and they dared me to propose to James.

On Trip to the Coast.

"Well, I did. I went out to walk with him on the morning of January 13, and while on Washington street I said to him: 'Well, James, I won't have to remain single this year.' He asked why? and I said: 'Because it's Leap Year.' He said it was up to me and I then proposed to him. He accepted me, and the next day procured a marriage license.

"He had to leave Boston on a business trip, and was gone a week, but he got back on January 20 and we went to the justice of the peace and were married. And we are very happy. We both hope to win that $25 prize.

Mr. and Mrs. Garceaux left for a trip to San Francisco last night, but they are coming back to Boston later to set up housekeeping.

WILSON URGED COOLIE LABOR OVER ITALIAN

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 27.—Gesner Williams, a leading independent Democrat of Southern California and an attorney of prominence has issued an open letter to Senator Francis G. Newlands, of Nevada, in answer to Senator Newlands' suggestion that all Pacific coast Democrats support Woodrow Wilson for president.

Mr. Williams' letter is caustic. He sharply questions Senator Newlands' authority or ability to represent the Pacific Coast Democrats and cites Dr. Wilze's arguments in favor of Chinese immigration and against the Italian, Hungarian and Polish immigration as an evidence of Wilson's lack of basic democracy.

Mr. Williams' letter follows:

Hon. Francis G. Newlands,
U. S. Senator, Washington.

Dear Sir:—I note in a recent letter you sent to the chairman of the Democratic State Committee of Nevada, an appeal to the Democrats of the Pacific Coast to support Professor Woodrow Wilson as their candidate for the presidency. I do not see what authority you have to represent or appeal to the people of the Pacific Coast. Certainly you have no right to represent or express their sentiments.

Cites Wilson's Book.

Professor Wilson has for twenty years been writing, speaking and teaching in direct opposition to the fundamental principles of Democracy and in special and peculiar opposition to the principles and policies advocated by the Democrats of the Pacific coast. Let me for instance cite one concrete example. In Professor Wilson's "History of the American People," volume 5, he says in discussing Chinese immigration:

"Now there came multitudes of men of the meanest class from South Italy and men of the meaner sort out of Hungary and Poland, men out of the ranks where there was neither skill nor energy, nor any initiative of quick intelligence and they came in numbers as great as the whole population of Ireland. If the countries of the South of Europe were disburdening themselves of the more sordid and helpless element of their population.

"The Chinese were more to be desired as working men, if not as citizens, than most of the coarse crew that came crowding in every year at the eastern ports. They had, no doubt, many unsavory habits, but it was their skill, their intelligence, their power of labor, their knack of succeeding and driving duller rivals about, rather than their alien habits, that made the Chinese feared and hated and led to their exclusion, as the prayer of the men whom they were likely to displace, should they multiply. Those are the fellows who came in at our eastern ports were tolerated because they accepted the place that was the lowest in the scale of labor."

Here is an undemocratic an utterance as has ever been delivered by the federalist school, which Henry Cabot Lodge leads, and of which Professor Wilson has always been an active disciple until he became a candidate for office.

Professor Wilson's statement is not more undemocratic in its advocacy of the Chinese than it is in its unjust and unwarranted reflection upon the immigrants from Southern Italy and Hungary and Poland.

Professor Wilson entirely misunderstands the attitude of the people of the United States and misinterprets the motives which led the people of the Pacific Coast to oppose Chinese immigration.

American civilization, which is the highest expression of modern civilization, has for its very foundation a high standard of living. The high standard of living is at once the main support and the main achievement of modern civilization.

For centuries the great mass of the people have expended their labor and their lives to raise the standard of living to secure better wages and better working conditions; to limit the hours of labor; to obtain the leisure which permits greater enjoyment of life and to secure the education which makes for better citizenship.

A high standard of living means comfort in the home, opportunity for the children, mental and moral development for the family.

Hits Immigration Argument.

It means better living conditions, better citizenship, better government, greater opportunity and greater happiness for the whole people. Whatever threatens the standard of living, threatens all of these advantages to secure which has been the object and centuries of effort. Nothing has threatened these benefits so greatly as the invasion of Oriental labor with Oriental ideals of morality, or rather immorality, and with a debased standard of living.

In fighting to keep out this oriental invasion and to prevent grinding competition with Oriental conditions from reducing the high American standard of living, American citizens were fighting in behalf of the American home, in behalf of American political and social ideas and for the preservation of the American spirit of democracy.

If Professor Wilson can so misunderstand and misrepresent action of the people of the United States in opposing Chinese immigration and in endeavoring to preserve their standard of living, he has no sympathy with the aspirations of the mass of people, and no real understanding of the conditions which underlie our American civilization.

Professor Wilson's reflection upon the Italian and Hungarian and Polish immigrants who have come to be recognized as among the best members of our citizenship, is too prejudiced, too obviously unjust and unwarranted to need any refutation.

The Italians and Hungarians and other European immigrants make good American citizens, and instead of reducing our standard of living speedily raise their standard of living to ours.

Represents "Superior Class."

The descendants of these immigrants, educated at our public schools, are often the leaders in the intellectual and the political life of this country and contribute their full share to make this country the great nation that it is.

As a matter of fact these immigrants and the descendants of these immigrants are doing as much as any other class of inhabitants at any other time of our history to increase the wealth of this country, to advance American ideas and to raise the general standard of living.

Citizens such as these understand American conditions and sympathize with American purposes far better than Professor Wilson does. The future of this nation and the preservation of American ideas and conditions can much better be left to them than to the supercilious, self-confident, superior class represented by Professor Wilson and by his apologist, Senator Newlands, of Nevada.

Yours truly,
GESNER WILLIAMS.

WILSON CITY CLUB GUEST

and posed for the photographers.

It was sugested by the photographers that the two Governors lock arms. Governor Wilson said: "O, that would be too fastidious."

They were then asked to clasp hands, which they did while the photographers "snapped" them.

Governor Wilson's call lasted twenty minutes.

Denial by Wilson.

Governor Wilson to-day put Colonel Henry Watterson of Kentucky in the Annisquam Club. The Governor was shown a copy of the press dispatches containing correspondence between Watterson and Senator Tillman given out in Washington last night. When he came to the paragraph in which Colonel Watterson asserts he had undertaken to raise campaign funds at Governor Wilson's instance, the New Jersey Governor exclaimed, pounding his fist with his fist to give emphasis to his remarks:

"Great Scott! It's the most remarkable paragraph I've ever read. What do you think of that? It is absolutely untrue. The Governor Wilson dictated this statement:

"So far as I am concerned, the statement that Colonel Watterson was requested to raise money in my behalf is absolutely without foundation. Neither he nor any one authorized to represent me, ever made such a request to him."

"How about the Harvey matter? Don't you want to clear that up?" asked the reporters.

"That question has cleared itself up, hasn't it?" Governor Wilson asked, with a smile.

"Do you still think that Colonel Watterson is a nice old gentleman?" he was asked.

"I have always had a high regard for Colonel Watterson."

"Will you comment upon Mr. Bryan's connection with the controversy?"

"Not a word. I knew nothing about it until I read these letters. I know nothing about it and my statement covers everything, anyway."

Mayor Sees Wilson.

The Governor had a short conference with Edward A. Filene. Mayor Fitzgerald also called early and was shown to the Governor's suite.

A delegation from the Lowell Board of Trade, consisting of President Green, Secretary Murphy and a Mr. Wilson, also called during the morning. They would not state the purpose of their visit, but it is supposed they called for the purpose of trying to get the Governor to visit Lowell. This, it is said, he will not be able to do.

Asked about the Lawrence strike, the Governor said: "I do not want to mix in anybody else's quarrels. I would not come into another jurisdiction and express an opinion."

The Governor was asked if he had any message to give to the people of Nevada. He said:

"I think not, except what I say at the City Club, in my speech at Cambridge and tonight at the Somerset."

Governor Wilson gave out, through Mayor Fitzgerald at the Somerset to-day, the first detailed explanation he has made so far of his reason for refusing to indorse the candidacy of ex-Senator James Smith of New Jersey to the United States Senate. Governor Wilson repeated to Mayor Fitzgerald the conversation he had with Smith when he refused to indorse Smith.

Mayor Fitzgerald arrived at the Somerset at 10.30, was shown up to Governor Wilson's room and came down again at 11 o'clock. To the reporters the Mayor said: "I had a talk with Governor Wilson. We talked over politics in general in Massachusetts. Governor Wilson said he was glad to come here and see something of the State and to renew acquaintance with President Lowell of Harvard."

Asks Court of Honor.

From Washington to-day comes the news that Colonel Watterson suggested a "court of Honor" as the best means of settling the Harvey-Wilson-Watterson controversy. He gave out the following:

"In my letter to Senator Tillman I offered to furnish him proof of any disputed statement made by me. If Senator Tillman will do me this honor, personally to call upon me, as I am confined to my hotel and cannot personally call upon him, I will furnish him proof not only that I had authorization to raise money for the Wilson campaign, but that I did in fact raise a considerable sum.

"In case Senator Tillman's averment after inspecting this proof be deemed equivocal or insufficient, I propose that Governor Wilson name two confidential friends; I to name two, the four to name a fifth and this court of gentlemen, thus constituted, determine the issue between us.

"I must insist that this be as once, as I must leave Washington next Tuesday night to fill important engagements."

With this statement Mr. Watterson declined to say: "The gentleman has up and exhibit to the gentlemen's "court." He stands ready to display them at once. It was made when the doughty colonel was asked how Governor Wilson's statement denying that Watterson was authorized to collect funds for Thomas Fortune Ryan is said to have subscribed.

Watterson Indisposed.

"I never yet entered a public controversy that I did not come out with colors flying," said the Kentuckian. "And when I make a serious public statement of momentous import as this, I have proof to back it up.

"The picturesque plan of a "gentlemen's court" is regarded as typically Watterson. With his head swathed in gauze bandages, nursing a pet carbuncle on his nose, writing his caustic locks into a typical pompadour, Mr. Watterson snapped out the challenge.

Senator Tillman, when shown the statement of Colonel Watterson, said to a National News Association representative: "I have no issue to settle before a "Court of Honor," and I shall have nothing what ever to add to what I already have said. It is a matter now for Governor Wilson and Colonel Watterson to settle between their controversy, and I leave it to them."

GREAT HELP TO CIVIL SERVICE

One of the important subjects in a civil service examination is United States History. It is given especial attention by the examiners. How many are familiar with the marvellous history of the United States, especially during the last fourteen years, during which time the Philippines, Porto Rico, Hawaii and Guam were added to United States territory?

Croscup's History is an invaluable aid to anyone preparing for a civil service examination. It is not only an instructive work to the public generally, but it is interesting as well.

Students in the public schools and at the high schools will find Croscup's History a wonderful aid in their study of history. In it there is packed information that no amount of "cramming" will give you so quickly.

A few minutes' reference to this history now and then will put you in possession of information that will surprise your friends in argument or conversation.

Croscup's History is one of the three reference books included in the new coupon offer of the AMERICAN. Clip the coupon in the AMERICAN to-day and get a copy of this history.

No Odds How Sick Your Stomach, How Hard Your Head Aches or How Bilious—Cascarets Make You Feel Great.

You men and women who somehow can't get feeling right—who have an almost daily headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach or have backache and feel all worn out.

Are you keeping clean inside with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—do good—never gripe or sicken.

RICHESON CAST OFF BY CHURCH

Clarence Y. T. Richeson has been cast off by the church of which he was pastor and stripped of the title "reverend" and all affiliation of the denomination in which he was ordained.

The former clergyman and self-confessed murderer of Avis Linnell now stands without the pale of any church.

Letters discussing the crime of Clarence Y. T. Richeson, condemned to death for the murder of Avis Linnell, still continue to pour into the AMERICAN office.

One of the most striking of the letters received is as follows:

Editor AMERICAN:

"Lest We Forget" is the title of a poem I am inclosing in sending it to the Richeson case. And, in the midst of the excitement of Lawrence and the birth of liberty generally, I am glad that the Boston AMERICAN is not all wing to the Governor and Governing board, nor the people of the county to forget the details of Richeson's revolting crime. Sometimes we forget too easily, even in a few weeks or a few months.

As I sit here at my desk in this century old academy I can see the great presses of the Boston AMERICAN sending out to the world editorial that had influence. Even at this very moment the presses are burning out some edition of the AMERICAN.

For a thousand and one reasons I am glad that the AMERICAN is determined not to let people forget until the final chapter is closed. And this the reason: Before being sent to the vice-presidency of this academy I held a little church very near to Hyannis. Such a work in such towns as there are on the Cape unfold wonderful possibilities. They trust their ministers only simple folk can. Betrayal offers tremendous opportunities in such a trusting community if a traitor be there. I wish that we could use Kipling's phrase over and over in the Boston AMERICAN until it stings itself with a determined voice from the lips of every citizen determined to see justice done, "Lest we forget!"

LEST WE FORGET.

A little town where sea winds blow
From east, the east, from out the west;
Where sand dunes shimmer in the glow
Are sails and fishing craft at rest;
Where homes are white and skies are blue,
Women true, and men are true.

A black heart in the guise of mask,
With gentle word, and subtle charm
Renews the weekend of that flock;
Betrays, his trust and sucks vile honey
From a simple, trusting hand
His plot, his schemes of lust is laid.

And now that death in quick succession
Visit fate from justice' throne is sent,
A penitent's confession
And damns to be saved, the "trick".
And rips the cross, and spits upon the grave
And tears, though he himself has slain!

Then maudlin sentiment cries out
Its shrill, maniacs, puny shout,
But Justice in its discomfort
And Mankind in its great intent
Cries out that all this should not bear.
In voice full virile, ringing clear,
"Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget!"

PHELPS BURIED AT CONCORD

Enclosed in a plain pine coffin furnished by the State, all that is mortal of Silas North Phelps, who was electrocuted for the murder of Sheriff Hoskins of Franklin County, was taken from the North Grove Street Morgue by Undertaker John Bryant of Concord and placed on board a train leaving the North Station for Concord.

Immediately on arrival in Concord, the coffin containing Phelps' body was taken to the burial ground back of the Reformatory and there interred.

There wasn't a soul to witness the interment except Undertaker Bryant's man and the grave diggers. Not a prayer was said at the grave.

FUND FOR RELIEF OF MRS. PHELPS IS NOW $1,233.25

Governor Foss, members of the Executive Council and others by their contributions have swelled the fund for the relief of Mrs. Silas N. Phelps, made a widow by the execution of her husband. Governor Foss gave $100, and the Councilors, $25 each.

Joseph W. Stevens, president of the First National Bank of Greenfield, John E. Denoran, cashier of the same bank, and William A. Davenport, who was senior counsel for Phelps, have agreed to serve as trustees for whatever fund may be raised for Mrs. Phelps and her children.

Governor Foss' check for $100 was accompanied by a letter in which the Governor briefly and pointedly outlines his attitude toward capital punishment. The Governor says in part:

I hope that in time a man of brutal instincts, as Phelps undoubtedly was, if he commits such a serious offence as his, will be confined in a prison where he can be kept from doing injury, but where he can at the same time work hard for the support of his family. It is my opinion that this tragedy, with the wide and morbid publicity which it receives, can be of no benefit whatever to Massachusetts.

That tragedy demonstrates to criminals that, so far from holding life sacred, the State itself will take it under sufficient provocation. It is not therefore to be inferred that a criminal, when tempted in a fit of violence in a moment when crazed by anger or fear, may feel himself entitled to do as the State does?

The old theory of punishment for crime has died out. The only remaining consideration is the protection of society, both from men who have committed crimes and from others who are likely to do so. But it has never been proved that the death penalty for murder has decreased the number of murders, and it is impossible to suppose that so far as the criminal is concerned, society is protected or helped in any way by a hanging or an electrocution.

JOHN AND POLLY

When John and Billy take the car
They cross the streets with greatest care
For first they look both left and right
To see if direct cars are in sight,
And if they see a trolley-car
They stop exactly where they are;
And even if it's some slow
They wait until it's past, you know;
And when it has gone by—"Hark,"
They do not cross to very fast,
Because they carefully look back
Before they cross the other track.
An automobile, or a horse
Is also dangerous, of course
Unless the chauffeur knows his hand,
The children on the corner stand.
Their minds down children need,
And that is very wrong indeed
The motor-man all do their best,
—The children ought to do the rest;
For if you run before a car,
The chances very likely are
They cannot stop the car in time,—
And that would sadly end my rhyme.

THE PERIL OF THE STREET

Swiftly moving through the city,
Rushes traffic's endless stream?
Busy street car, "auto," wagon,
Whirl as in a troubled dream.

Watch your footsteps when you're waiting;
Pick your way with every care;
Left and right, a hundred dangers
Crowd about you—so beware.

Most of all, for little children,
There is danger in the street;
For the throng and rear confuses
Little heeds and little feet.

Darting quick before a street car,
Slips the child's foot on the pave;
Quick the driver sees—"Inclose!—
Nothing now the child can save.

Twisted back or shattered shoulder,
Lame of foot or may be dead;
Heavy price of childish rashness,
Children, careful where you tread!

O beware the moving street car!
Make it not your plaything, boys.
Sizzling rides is risky business;
Better take to safer toys.

CORBETT'S CHAT

Manchester and Nashua Important Industrial Centres—Concord and Lexington, Mass., Right in Line—Other Interesting Notes.

Manchester may be well called the clerks. W. A. Wagner & Co., bakers and metropolis of New Hampshire. The principal thoroughfare is Elm street, lined by attractive stores. One of the landmarks is the city hall with its tower of unique beauty. A series of arches span Elm street at intervals for nearly half a mile, illuminated by hundreds of little electric bulbs, makes a pretty sight at night. The Manchester Chamber of Commerce, composed of enterprising and influential business men, is continually emphasizing the unusual commercial and manufacturing advantages of that city. Manchester produces nearly $50,000,000 of manufactured goods annually. Hon. Edward A. Smith, Mayor, was born in Manchester October 25, 1856. He was chosen city clerk in 1897, holding that position until elected Mayor in 1910. Fred E. Allen, city treasurer, has held this office for the last 12 years. This fact alone speaks most eloquently relative to Mr. Allen as a man and public official.

The Peoples Gas Company was organized in 1887 and first along had 2,000 customers. To-day this company has some 13,000 patrons. The company started in with about 36 miles of pipe; now the mains extend 94 miles. This, briefly, shows that the Peoples Gas Company is in a going concern and keeps pace with the growth of the city. Walter G. Afrin, general manager and treasurer, is the right man in the right place. Under his able management the company has made rapid progress, is noted and given to-day a first-class service.

The Traction, Light and Power Company gives very satisfactory public service. There are two traction companies in all and public-spirit in the make-up of the management. That's why the trolley car service is so good, and the electric lights give so much in the way of brilliant efficiency. The electric current turns the wheels of industry hum so swiftly. Not many cities think they've the right kind of live business men who know how to do things—and do them!

WHEELER'S ICE CREAM.

Have you tried Wheeler's ice cream? If you have, that settles it—I don't need to say another word.

There may be those, however, who have not looked into the question of pure ice cream; so I will state a few facts. First, let me say that he sells at least 20,000 gallons a year. His ice cream factory is the largest in New Hampshire devoted to the manufacture of ice cream and sherbets. The establishment is light, airy, and the sanitary conditions are flawless. The machinery is modern and includes the new brine tube freezer, by which will not permit anything of a foreign nature to come in contact with the ice cream to contaminate it—with the result, a smooth, velvety product. Edwin H. Wheeler, the wide-awake proprietor, is a native of Manchester, belongs in many societies and is very popular. He has made use he sells confectionery, soda, post cards and newspapers.

WELL-EQUIPPED GARAGE.

The Red Arrow Garage, centrally-located, commodious and well-appointed, equipped with modern appliances and conveniences, has every facility for accommodation for the care of automobiles. Bills may be charged, and gasoline and supplies usually found in stock at a first-class garage. Manager Putney is a "Yankee" and has the knack of getting credit for the grand automobile show held in Manchester last year. It would be hard to have charge of a similar exhibition in that city next July. Automobiling is rapidly adopting this popular garage, he is agent for the Cadillac Motor Car and Overland Motor Trucks. Mr. Putney is a native of Manchester and is very popular extensively. He is fortunate in having a pleasing personality and is well equipped, as a young man of marked ability. He is wide-awake to the needs of a first-class and is willing to take the initiative to arouse public interest and to better conditions generally—all of which must enhance his popularity.

GOOD HORSES.

The Cavanaugh Brothers, auction and commission dealers in all grades of horses, are doing business and living up to the pace extending over New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine and as far south as Boston. They sell some 5,000 horses annually—3,000 were sold in Manchester last year. They have extensive Sales and Boarding Stables in Taunton. By the way, the Wonder Cold Cure for Distemper is sold by the Cavanaugh, is highly recommended. These famous horsemen commenced business in Manchester in 1878.

John Thomas, of 1,078 Elm street, has won an enviable reputation as a baseball player, umpire and sporting writer, and is a member of the Mohawk Indoor Baseball Club.

Louis Vogel's livery and boarding stable takes good care of horses and vehicles, backs for weddings, funerals and other occasions at short notice. A specialty of turn-outs is taken to Boston. Mr. Vogel also deals in hay and grain.

Twenty years ago Dodge, Merrill & Co., furniture dealers, began in small way on 906 Elm street, now occupy the entire Main street. Reliable goods, and square dealing have been the watchwords. Manufacturing jewelers and opticians, have a fine store, and in fitting prescriptions for optical work do their own grinding. This is a line in which they excel.

Elmer D. Goodwin, the mortician, takes a just pride in Manchester and his record. Right from the start he has done well and learn of the advantages Manchester and New Hampshire's industrial centre needs more men of his enterprising nature.

Whitney & Co., insurance agents, personally supervises each patron's requirements, which are satisfactorily attended to. He carries a choice stock of optical goods, also Kodaks and photographic supplies.

At Dyer & Chipman's modern store is found a choice stock of drugs, chemicals, toilet articles, etc., at inviting prices. They have a large and growing business the past 17 years. F. R. Johnson's new shop of Manchester has always on hand fresh home-made candies, ices, sherbets, etc., and caters to parties and weddings in first-class style.

Edgar W. Poore has that popular coal and wood business long been in the painting and paperhanging business for years, but for 20 years has dealt in coal and wood. He gives satisfaction. Everybody in all right with Roy's Cafe—Wilfred Roy, proprietor, wouldn't have it otherwise. Good meals at reasonable prices. A specialty is made of oysters and lobsters. Roy H. Powers, Manchester boy and one of F. W. Woolworth's popular five and ten cent stores, is on Hanover street. H. L. Hall is the enterprising manager. The Hotel Middlesex, with Federal heat, steam heat and electric lights in rooms, and you can't beat the location for a hotel. Sir A. Ballou takes good care of guests. E. S. Moore knows every inch of the starting gives back service for all occasions, and takes good care of the money. G. A. Hadley, proprietor of Hadley Pharmacy, graduate of Nashua and Manchester, knows his business. Both restaurants are conducted on modern lines—good food, well served, at moderate cost. Owen J. Boston, manufacturer of a number of delicious home-made candies, finds a market for his confectionery all over New England. Agents for West as Chicago. Gorman Brothers declare in means, groceries and provisions, conduct three stores, carry choice goods, including confectionery. Also agents for Old Home flour. They employ 25 stock of goods. Ernstus H. Smith, real estate dealer, is a native of Concord, and has been in business for 30 years, also acting as specialty of Concord and Concord Junction property. A. Tupaula, the domestic baker, also serves lunches and has a fine restaurant. His establishment is clean and he uses pure ingredients in preparing food. He is ably assisted by Mrs. Tupaula.

John C. Friend, the druggist, has been 40 years in the business, carries a complete stock of goods at popular prices, and employs two registered pharmacists.

C. H. Towle has been in his present store 23 years, and is leading line of groceries, crockery, seeds and farming tools, and always right. E. Herbert Ardson, proprietor of the gold corner drug store, sells as apothecary's supplies generally at low prices. Prescription work a specialty — drugs carefully compounded. John M. Keyes, electrical contractor and dealer in lumbers' hardware, sporting goods, bicycles, is also interested in selling a flourishing business at his main store, 1,000 Elm street. Mr. Keyes is also agent for the United Motor Car Co. Maxwell, Chalmers and Hupp motor supplies and does all kinds of automobile repairing. The Boston store, Elm street, is the right "the big busy store," is building up a good trade. Its line of ladies' and men's furnishings is complete, attractive, and courteous patrons. The James B. Wood & Son Co., dealers in coal, wood, lime, etc., is one of the oldest, most reliable and largest concerns in Concord.

The McManus Stable, Philip and Francis McManus, proprietors, furnishes hacks for all occasions, and has a choice line of stages for tourists, has 25 good horses. Special attention.

Wendell P. Davis, M. D., has been in the present location, Association Hall, since 1903, where he established a good practice. He is a graduate of Tufts College, class of 1897.

A. C. A. Hunter's Garage cars are stored and promptly repaired. Mr. Hunter is a practical machinist and has had an extended experience along this line.

Lexington.

Lexington and Concord, on account of that 1775 mix-up, will always remain two of the most historic spots connected with colonial communities. Lexington is all right; it has a fine high school, Cary Memorial Library, many real estate dealers of Boston, have established a residential section one of the best equipped suburban offices found anywhere. The various real estate deals handled by this firm in Boston and Concord cover up into the millions. They have an office in Boston's down-town district and have about 24 competent, all-round salesmen.

W. R. Candela's well-appointed pharmacy is doing a good business. He is agent for selling pure drugs and honest dealing. No substitutes. Prescriptions a specialty. Charles S. Reave deals in Lexington geneal estate, insurance and mortgages. Reave's real estate generally, including Lexington, Lincoln, Concord, Bedford and Burlington. Reave has been in business, as noted, nine years. Has a large list of farming, building, etc., in a most satisfactory manner. Lexington is a fine residential town and household goods in a careful manner. Charles A. Burke, plumber, tin and sheet iron worker, has been in business 12 or 15 years. Has constantly employed. A PROGRESSIVE ESTABLISHMENT.

Of late everytime I visit Wolfe's, "My Clothier," down Tremont street, Boylston and streets, I am forcefully impressed with the tremendous success this big Eaton Wolfe establishment has made in 15 years. It is clearly illustrative of what a live-wire, far-sighted, square dealing—yes, "your money back if you want it"—up-to-date and all-around good management may accomplish.

The Providence Show.

I attended the automobile show in Providence this week, and I feel that the one held in the State Armory, I took in the Ford exhibit, successfully managed by Fatso Whitney Flint, who has ideas of his own and does things along automobile lines that are proven by results. Last Thursday Mr. Flint sold 29 Ford cars, which is about the total merits of the Ford machines, and this in conjunction with the price—$690 for a 5-passenger car—is what talks.

JORDAN RAPS HOT MILK CARS

Milk Inspector James C. Jordan says concerning charges that frozen milk had caused the deaths of two babies, that certain railroads deserve censure for the way they handle the milk.

He found the cars were overheated in order to thaw out frozen milk. After the thawing, he said, certain fats form that make the milk dangerous for drinking.

It has been brought to my attention by good authority," said Inspector Jordan, "that during the cold spells in and around Boston certain milk contractors have made arrangements with railroads to have employes board milk trains and start fires in stoves that are provided.

"Of course it is understood that milk should not be allowed to freeze and still it should not be kept in cars that are too warm. These companies have come to extremes in the handling of the milk and should be brought to task.

"My attention has been brought to this fact only recently, but I believe this state of affairs has been going on for a considerable length of time.

"It is supposed that the railroads are to take proper care of milk while it is in their possession, but I have learned that they store it in cars that are fitted with wood stoves, and when the fires in the stove has been turned on, allowing the milk to go above the desired temperature. After the frozen milk thaws, certain fats form that are by no means good for the human body.

WOBURN LEAGUE WINS FIRST CASE

Samuel Higbley, a Woburn druggist, was found guilty in Woburn District Court today, after a trial lasting ten weeks, of exposing for sale a drink of intoxicating liquor nuisance. He will be sentenced next Saturday. The conviction of Higbley on two counts is the first victory for the Woburn Law Enforcement League, which inaugurated an extensive crusade against illegal selling last Fall.

Pass Along The Good Word

That Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is to-day and has, for over 40 years, been the standard Blood-purifier, Stomach Strengthener and Liver Invigorator sold by druggists. It's not a secret nostrum but a medicine of known composition — a medicine so good that the best physicans prescribe it knowing that its ingredients, which are printed on its outside wrappers and attested under oath, are the best known to medical science for the diseases for which it is advised.

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—at times better. But you are thinking of the cure not his greater profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in Plain English; or, Medicine Simplified, 1008 pages, over 700 illustrations, newly revised, up-to-date Edition, now bound in paper covers, sent for 21 one-cent stamps, only. Cloth-bound, 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

NO MINNESOTA GAME THIS YEAR

Although ex-President Roosevelt is doing his utmost to bring about athletic relations between the University of Minnesota and Harvard, there is little likelihood that the two institutions will meet on the track or on the football field this year.

It is not that the Harvard athletic officials would not like to have the Crimson meet the Minnesota college, but because of the distance and of the expense to bring about such relations.

In speaking about the proposed dual track meet and the football game, Graduate Manager William F. Garceau of Harvard to-day said:

"Harvard would like to put the University of Minnesota on both the track and football schedules, but to travel to Western university on the track this year would mean the dropping of Dartmouth and Harvard now has a default at the hands of Dartmouth to settle. To take them on at football would mean an added expense for us to do this. If the officials of the with no gain, and Harvard cannot afford open date caused by the dropping of Carlisle were to be filled by either Vanderbilt or Michigan I should say that Vanderbilt would be selected, but that matter has not yet come before the athletic committee."

Coach "Dick" Grant of the University of Michigan was one of the fastest middle distance runners who has ever represented the Crimson.

It is understood that the Harvard schedule has been arranged with the exception of November 9. Vanderbilt is looked upon as the college which will be selected to appear at Cambridge on that date. Carlisle was to have been given the date, but it is understood that the Indians are to be dropped this year and that some new college is to be taken. Coach Percy Haughton, it is said, is in favor of giving the open date to Minnesota.

NEW YORK STARS IN B. A. A. MEET

About every New York athlete of importance will be seen in competition at the big indoor meet of the B. A. A. which takes place on February 10. George V. Brown, who has charge of the meet of the Unicorn organization, has just returned from New York, and says that the Gotham athletes are very enthusiastic about the B. A. A. games and that they will be out in large numbers.

Among the New York contingent will be the great Martin Sheridan, "Peerless" Mel Sheppard, Harry Gissing, George Bonhag, Rosenberger, Myers, Johnny Collins, "Babe" McDougall, Bill Kraemer, Jack Eller, Tommy Collins and the rest of the athletic stars of the big New York athletic clubs.

Bonhag will star in the three-mile special and should put up a classy race. Bonhag is the greatest middle-distance runner in the world to-day. He hasn't an equal in races from three to ten miles.

It will be a treat to see Mel Sheppard and Harry Gissing battle for supremacy in the middle distant races. These men are old rivals and always be relied upon to put up a thrilling race.

Sheppard recently underwent a serious operation, but is now reported as being as good as ever. Many say that he intends to try for the Olympic team and hopes to do his part in bringing new honors to Old Glory.

The rest of the New York athletes have a pretty fair worth time and again. Many of them are title holders and will be members of the Olympic team without doubt.

NEW BASKETBALL RULES DRAWN UP

Chairman Thomas J. Murphy of the Greater Boston A. A. U. Basketball League, has called a meeting of all the managers for next Monday night at the rooms of the Cunningham Gym, East Milton. The purpose of the meeting is to enforce a new rule of each team posting a forfeit before each game for appearance. If the team fails to appear, as has been the case in many of the games this season, especially at Quincy, the forfeit will be used to defray the expenses of the other team. With this rule enforced Mr. Murphy believes that the league will work more smoothly.

There has been much dissatisfaction on the part of the officials of the league and it is probable that new ones will be elected. Another rule that may be made is that if a player fails to show up he is subject to suspension until he does. The Lynn Y. M. C. A. journeys to East Milton to-night, where it meets the Cunningham Gym. team, in a Greater Boston League game. The game will undoubtedly be attended by a large crowd, as both teams are bunched closely in the standing.

The home aggregation is only a few games behind the Lynn team and are out for a win in to-night's game. The Milton boys have been playing excellent basketball on their home floor and probably would be holding a higher position in the league to-day if some of the other teams had good-sized halls.

The game between the second teams is sure to be a hummer. The secrets of its standing in the league the Gym five is a strong favorite, having lost but a game this year. The boys will play their hardest to bring another victory home to-night and keep their lost column a clean one.

The Lynn youngsters are confident that they will be the first team to tie defeat on the Milton boys. The team will have to work fast in order to win and pile up a good-sized score.

FRENCH CHAMPION BEATS YOUNG DYSON

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Lewis de Pontbriand, who claims the lightweight championship of France, has shown New York fight followers that he is capable of bigger game than "Young" Dyson, the English pretence scrapper, whom he easily outpointed at the New Polo A. A. to-night. De Pontbriand outclassed the Britisher with some of the best footwork from now on. The Frenchman stopped a sensational series of victories when he beat Dyson last night, for the New England boy has been the talk of the lightweight division here for several months. De Pontbriand fought chiefly through clever feinting and blocking.

HARRY LEWIS INJURED IN LONDON ACCIDENT

LONDON, Jan. 27.—Harry Lewis, the American pugilist, is seriously ill here. Lewis was injured in a taxicab accident a few days ago and paid little attention to the hurts at the time, deeming them inconsequential. Since then complications have developed, and to-day Lewis is delirious and under the care of a specialist.

FARRINGTON PLAYS HYDE FOR TITLE

PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 27.—H. P. Farrington, of the Woodland Golf Club, will oppose James R. Hyde of the South Shore Field Club in the final of the Palm Year golf tourney here to-day. The latter is the favorite for first honors, as he won the Florida championship last year. Hyde beat H. J. Topping of Greenwich, 3 and 3, and Farrington won, 3 and 1, in the second flight. Dr. Daniel Karsner, Philadelphia, beat W. L. Hodgskins, Methuen, 1 up.

CORBETT IN CHICAGO AFTER JACK JOHNSON

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—James J. Corbett, former champion, left Chicago to-day, after looking for Jack Johnson, who had gone away. He wanted to talk over some charges made by Johnson accusing Jim of "faking," and he wanted to take him to task vehemently. Jack apparently didn't care for the conversation. Corbett intimated he would engage an attorney and force Johnson to prove all the takings he had said about the former champion's faking. Incidentally Corbett took occasion to remark that Johnson is about the biggest fakir in the business, and the Pittsburgh boxer would be the biggest fake of the lot. Corbett said Jack would let the Pueblo fireman stay for ten or fifteen rounds just to make the moving pictures good.

PADDY CALLAHAN IN GREAT FORM

By JACK CONWAY.

"Irish Paddy" Callahan, the hard hitting South Boston featherweight, is at it again. Paddy has won three bouts over Gotham the past week. Joe McCarthy's little whirlwind is in excellent condition and isn't the least bit bashful about meeting the best boys of his weight in the East. In fact, Paddy will not object to meeting boys who outweigh him by six or eight pounds, provided that he is given enough coin for his troubles.

Paddy has been boxing around New England for the past year. The local featherweights, however, have a whole some respect for Callahan, and during the past few months he has found it next to impossible to earn enough money to make the "eats" come regularly.

Joe McCarthy decided that the best thing for him and his protege to do was to beat it to other climes. They therefore took a trailer for New York.

Callahan has spent the greater part of his life in and around the big town, but regardless of this he is not any too well known there. Consequently it was a cinch for him to get matches with the leading boys of his weight over in Gotham as the majority of them believed that the South Boston pride would be easy picking.

Callahan's first bout was with Willie Jones, the veteran New York featherweight. Over 2000 cheering circles around his opponent and at one time had him all but beaten.

On last Wednesday night this same Jones took to mixing with Johnny Dundee, but was unable to go on at the last minute. The sporting officials then started out to get a substitute. The matchmaker of the Broadway club met Paddy and offered the latter the bout with Dundee. Callahan had just put in a stiff day of training, but accepted the offer promptly and fought Dundee. He made a great showing and if a decision had been rendered it would have been his.

Callahan continued his good work last night, handing out a bad beating to Frankie White of Chicago, who is supposed to be one of the best featherweights in the country. White outweighed his man by about fifteen pounds, but had all he could do to stay the limit.

The bell was the only thing that saved White in the fifth round, Paddy having sent him to the canvas with a terrific punch to the point of the jaw. White has a habit of dropping his hands.

Callahan never was and never will be Frank's meat. He is a typical example of the slam-bang variety and is never so happy as when he is mixing wallops with any opponent.

More power to you, Paddy.

"Fighting" Terry Brooke is open to meet the best lightweights in New England.

Frankie (K. O.) O'Connor is still waiting to hear from either Gilbert Gallant or Billy Aitken. He would like to get a go with either of these boys.

MUTT AND JEFF DO A DOUBLE STUNT.

"Jeff would know that face if it was starved and feathered," by "Bud" Fisher in the famous City Life Section of Sunday's AMERICAN.

DAILEY'S PETS FAIL TO APPEAR FOR MATCH

The Dailey's Pets displayed the white feather and failed to show up for their scheduled return game with the Mahoneys bowling team at the Howard Alleys. It is thought they were afraid, for they did not even take the time to notify the Charlestown club that they would not appear. The Mahoneys did not go off with a match, however, as Wolf's Pets were at the Howard alleys and they challenged the youngsters. The first string was won by the Pets by a rapping score of 494 and the Pets rolling for 480. The second string was won by the Mahoneys by 484 to 472. The Pets could not pull down enough pins in the third string, and the Charlestown boys won the match.

Harvard and Cornell should furnish a red hot hockey game at the Arena to-night. The contest has aroused a tremendous amount of enthusiasm and is sure to be witnessed by a large sized crowd of hockey enthusiasts.

Harvard rules a slight favorite. At the opening of the season, the Crimson seven failed to play well on the ice, being defeated by Tech.

But after it had a little practice, the Harvard seven came to the front with a rush and defeated the Princeton team in fine style.

On last Saturday, Harvard again played the Tigers, this time at the Arena, and was defeated in a bitterly contested struggle by a score of 3 to 2.

The Harvard team is now going at top speed. The forwards follow the puck in great shape, while the other players may be relied upon to hold their own with the best of them.

The Ithacan seven is reported as being in perfect condition for the fray and is out to down the Crimson stars. If they are going to do this, they will have to play the game of their lives.

Last Saturday Cornell put up a great game against Yale. Old Eli barely won out, after an extra period of twenty-six minutes. The Cornell seven has been coming fast during the past few weeks.

The team did not show to advantage at the opening of the season. This was due chiefly to the lack of experienced players. Captain Vail at goal and E. M. Schen at centre being the only veterans in the line-up. Some good men, however, have been developed to fill the other positions on the team.

BIG ARTILLERY MEET TO-NIGHT

More than 350 of the best track and field athletes in New England will compete in the big indoor athletic meet of the Massachusetts Coast Artillery which will take place at the Irvington Street Armory to-night.

The leading college, club and school athletes of New England will be on hand in order to battle for the high honors in the different events. A large sized crowd of spectators is expected to be on hand in order to witness the festivities.

The relay races will be the feature of the meet. The greatest amount of interest is being displayed in the meeting of the Harvard and B. A. A. relay teams. They will give battle in a one and two mile race.

The B. A. A. teams will be made up of a number of former Crimson stars. "Pooch" Donovan has the Harvard runners in excellent condition for to-night's race.

There will be some other good team races between Brown and Holy Cross, Tufts and Massachusetts Aggies, Boston College and Harvard freshmen, B. A. A. Midgets and Roxbury Latin Midgets, Powder Point School and Brookline Gym, Medford High and Volkmann, Cutler Y. M. C. A. and Quincy Y. M. C. A., Chelsea High and Malden High, English High and Boston College High, Commerce High and Mechanic Arts.

There will also be a series of military events, which will include a potato race, wall scaling, obstacle races and tug-o-war.

A large number of entries have been received for the open events. Seventy-five entries are out for the honors in the seventy-five-yard dash. Among this number are Bruce Edlund, formerly of the Brookline Gym, but now a member of the B. A. A., is picked to win this event. He is the best miler in New England.

Sid Silva and James Hennigan are the favorites in the three-mile run. These should be some fast work in the seventy-five-yard low hurdles with A. B. Shaw, Gardner, Smith and Cummings entered.

Rosamond, never dreaming for a moment that Desmond would dare invade the American Consulate, is surprised to see that international crook dashing up the steps of the building. At this time Rosamond should know that Desmond stops at nothing—at nothing—to gain his ends. A Consulate is to him is just a building by the sidewalk's rim, and nothing more.

Rushing back to the Consul's office Rosamond finds Reckless Hardy Shavus, of the U. S. A., laying down the law to the Consul, and appeals to him for help. Shavus, however, is so busy telling the Consul of some swear words he directed that he does not at once hear the interruption. The Consul may be interested or then again he may not.

In the meantime Claude, who is reducing in the Turkish baths, gets a telephone message telling him that the villain Desmond is at the door of the Consulate, where Rosamond has gone to be safe from the scoundrel's plotting. It is not much fun to get nerve disturbing messages when one is peacefully taking off weight, but heroic Claude has no time to hesitate.

Suddenly Desperate Desmond, the international crook, steps into the Consul's office, only to be instantly covered with a gun by Reckless Hardy Shavus. But Desmond is not to be scared by even the greatest war correspondent in the world. With a look of great cunning, he tips off the Consul that he has a great diplomatic secret to give him for his exclusive benefit.

Outside the Consulate something is happening. Claude has rushed out of the Turkish bath and is bounding up the steps bent on facing the villain and at all costs rescuing the lovely Rosamond from his evil grasp. Little, however, does Claude know the resources of the wily Desmond. He will not find it a simple matter to foil the crook.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "and I can tip you off on the Sultan's plans." The Consul promises to listen to the crook and the villain tells his story. Claude, Rosamond and Reckless Hardy Shavus, of the U. S. A., stand in the background and watch developments. Monday's paper shows them.

A Girl's Admirers

Are you one of the girls who is so fearful of sharing your good times that you steer men from the office girls?

There are many girls like that, and they are not loved by their own sex in consequence.

If it were only the unpopular girl who acted thus there might be some excuse for it—a man on her horizon is such a wonder that she wants to hold him. But there are girls who are belles who are selfish about keeping men to themselves.

Why do they do it?

Perhaps from vanity. They like to seem the great belle of their set, the one with an ever-growing string of admirers. So they rather take every strange man they meet as their property and take no chances by introducing him to other girls.

Perhaps from jealousy. Everyone is many a girl who would indignantly deny being jealous who presents that appearance by her dread of sharing her attention. She makes a point of keeping her men friends and her girl friends apart; she never introduces save when driven to it, and quickly follows the introduction by distraction of the other girl to the man, sometimes by open mischief-making.

Perhaps from selfishness. She thinks that the fewer girls a stranger in town knows the more time and money he will have to spend upon her.

Whatever the cause, it is a poor one and shortsighted. A girl must be uncertain of her own power to charm that she fears to stand her chances with other girls. A girl whose name is linked with a single beau by him from the midst of a dozen fascinating maidens. If he doesn't like her, nothing can chain him to her.

And the more a girl struggles to keep a man to herself the more restive grows that man. It is fatal for any girl to have ownership lits with the men that she wants to her. If the man be serious in his attentions he begins to wonder if his fair one is jealous. If he is only polite, he thinks the girl misunderstands politeness and cools off forthwith.

The more eligible a man is the higher he rates himself; the more inclined to sheer away from the girl who seeks to monopolize him.

I cannot express my thanks for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had taken other medicines but did not find relief."—Miss CORA B. FOSNAUGH, Stoy ville, Ohio, R.F.D., No. 1.

"FOR instance," he added, "I perceive that this window is broken, badly broken, and from the outside. Now how could that have occurred?"

"If you will kindly hear reason, Mr. Racksole," said Dimmock, "I will explain things to you. I regarded your first question to me when you entered my room as being offensively pat, but I now see that you had some justification.

"I was passing along this corridor about 11 o'clock, when I found Miss Racksole in a difficulty with the hotel servants. Miss Racksole was retiring to rest in this room when a large stone, which must have been thrown from the Embankment, broke the window, as you see." Apart from the discomfort of the broken window, she did not care to remain in the room. She argued that where one stone had come another might follow. She therefore insisted on her room being changed.

"The servants said there was no other room available with a dressing room and bathroom attached, and your daughter made a point of these matters. I at once offered to exchange apartments with her. She did me the honor to accept my offer."

Theodore Racksole looked at the young man for a few seconds in silence. There was a faint knock at the door.

"Come in," said Racksole loudly.

Some one pushed upon the door, but remained standing on the mat. It was Nella's maid. In a dressing gown.

"Miss Racksole's compliments and a thousand excuses, but a long letter has been left on the mantel shelf in this room. She cannot sleep, and wishes to read."

"Mr. Dimmock, I tender my apologies, my formal apologies," said Racksole when the girl had gone away.

"Pray, don't mention it," said Dimmock suavely, and bowed him out.

The Entrance of the Prince.

NEVERTHELESS, sundry small things weighed on Racksole's mind.

First, there was Why he's worth! Then there was the ribbon on the door handle and Jule's visit to No. 111, and the broken window—broken from the outside.

Racksole did not forget that the time was three A. M. He slept but little that night, but he was glad that he had bought the Grand Babylon Hotel.

It was an acquisition which seemed to promise fun and diversion.

The next morning he came across Mr. Babylon early.

"I have emptied my room of all personal papers," said Babylon, "and it is now at your disposal. I propose, if agreeable to yourself, to stay on in the hotel as a guest for the present. We have much to settle with regard to the completion of the purchase, and also there are things you want to ask me. Also, to tell the truth, I am not anxious to leave the old place with too much suddenness."

"I shall be delighted if you stay," said the millionaire, "but I must be as my guest, and not as the guest of the hotel."

"You are very kind."

"As for wishing to consult you, no doubt I shall have need to do so, but I must say that the show seems to run itself."

"Ah!" said Babylon thoughtfully, "I have heard of hotels that run themselves. If they do, you may be sure that they obey the laws of gravity and run downward. You will have your hands full. For example, have you yet heard about Miss Spencer?"

"No," said Racksole. "What of her?"

"She has mysteriously vanished during the night, and nobody appears to be able to throw any light on the affair. Her room is empty, her luggage gone. You will want some one to take her place, and that some one will not be very easy to get."

"Fine!" Racksole said, after a pause. "Here is not the only pest that fails vacant today."

A little later the millionaire installed himself in the late owner's private room and rang the bell.

"I want Jules," he said to the page.

While waiting for Jules, Racksole considered the question of Miss Spencer's disappearance.

The Remarkable Jules.

"Good morning, Jules," was his cheerful greeting when the imperturbable waiter arrived.

"Good morning, sir."

"Take a chair."

"Thank you, sir."

"We have met before this morning, Jules."

"Yes, sir; at 2 a. m."

"Rather strange about Miss Spencer's departure—is it not?" suggested Racksole.

"It is remarkable, sir."

"You are aware, of course, that Mr. Babylon has transferred all his interests in this hotel to me?"

"I have been informed to that effect, sir."

"I suppose you know everything that goes on in the hotel, Jules?"

"As head waiter, sir, it is my business to keep a general eye on things."

"You speak very good English for a foreigner, Jules."

"For a foreigner, sir! I am an Englishman, a Hertfordshire man, born and bred." Perhaps my name has misled you, sir. I am only called Jules because the head waiter of my really high-class hotel must have either a French or an Italian name."

"I see," said Racksole. "I think you must be rather a clever person, Jules."

"That is not for me to say, sir."

To Be Continued in To-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Arnold Bennett's great mystery story, "The Prince and the Plutocrat; or, The Grand Babylon Hotel," is running serially in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN. A generous instalment will be printed in Sunday's AMERICAN.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

THEODORE RACKSOLE, American multi-millionaire, traveling abroad with his daughter Nella, stops at the Grand Babylon, in London. Because he cannot get what he wants for dinner one night he buys the hotel from its owner, Felix Babylon. The hotel is greatly affected by royalties from the continent. In fact, Racksole meets the forerunner of one of them on the very night he buys the hotel. It is Reginald Dimmock, a young man whom Nella had run across the year before in Russia, and who turns out to be in the service of Prince Alberic, uncle and next in line of succession to Grand Duke Eugene, of Posen, one of the small duchies of Germany. After chatting with Mr. Babylon, Racksole starts to retire at 3 a. m. Approaching his own quarters he sees Jules, the head waiter, coming out of No. 111, his daughter's room. Racksole presents a reviver at the waiter's head, but Jules protests that No. 111 is occupied by a gentleman. Racksole compels Jules to open the room door and finds Dimmock there. In spite of Dimmock's protests Racksole begins to search the room, but finds no one else. A sudden draught on his shoulder causes him to turn toward the window of the room.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Red-Brick City

By LOUISE HEILGERS.

THERE are many red brick cities. Every little or big suburb round and about London owns several. Street upon street of little red brick houses, with little stiff gardens, which have little stiff trees growing in them, and often the family washing blowing over them. Doll-houses, which are not inhabitated, alas, by doll people, but rather by haggard-faced men and women, and prematurely-wise children; people who year after year wrestle with the problem of how to live on an income too small for their needs. But the foundation of a red brick city is respectability, so nobody knows the pitiful screwing and pinching that goes on behind the cheap muslin curtains and the rubber plant in the window of each little red brick house.

Still there are compensations. Sometimes, in the dull backyard of the life of an inhabitant of Red-Brick City, love passing, splendid and golden, shoots a burnished plume. Such a plume fell into the dull gray life of a girl who, knowing nothing better, lived in Red-Brick City, hating it, choking in its redness and sordidness; and its brightness glorified all her days.

For years she had hoped for nothing else than that the years should bring her a little red brick house for herself, where she could dwell with a husband and children of her own and do complicated arithmetic over a very uncomplicated amount of money, but, instead, the freedom of Red-Brick City in a little pictured postcard vottage where roses nodded at the windows and laid pink cheeks upon the little porch.

And She Smiled

Instead of streets of staring red-faced houses, there would be the quiet fields, instead of rows of little chimney pots hiding a friendly sky, there would only be trees breaking against the blueness. She could not sleep for nights thinking of it. love had been given her. Her husband was to be a city clerk, but a young man from the country who was to take her When she went through Red-Brick City on her daily journeylngs she smiled around at it as she might smile at a friend. She was leaving it, she was going from its respectability for good; she could afford to be generous.

Three weeks before the wedding day her lover came to her with an open letter in his hand and a radiant face. She read the letter. It was from an uncle in America who was growing old and wanted a strong young man as his side—a man to be related vaguely of increased responsibility and importance to the nephew if he pleased him, an uncle who had an only daughter.

As she read the petals of the roses growing over the little cottage fell one by one. It was as if an Autumn wind had passed and bared their golden hearts.

"Of course, I must go," his exultant voice broke upon her ear. "It would be madness to refuse. Why he's worth! I don't know how much. It only means postponing our wedding for a little while." His arm stole around her. "As soon as I get out there I'll explain to him about you. You'll see, it'll come as right as rain."

He Never Came Back

She listened, folding the letter carefully, and, with the letter, she folded away her dreams of the little cottage with roses nodding over it, and the quiet fields and the trees against the sky. Already a was deeper and wider than the green Atlantic seemed to stretch between them—the sea of Disillusion. She saw him cold, calculating, callous, where she had seen him ardent, loving, generous. She saw in him merely a man with an eye to a good thing instead of the lover who had hoped to call her wife. She saw life in all its nakedness, and shuddered at the ugliness of its face. She knew in that moment as clearly as if he had told her that he would never come back to—and she would never leave—Red Brick City.

She married a city clerk and a little red brick house of her own, and a fluctuating income, and, by-and-by, children.

But even in her dreams she never went home to a cottage where pink roses grew in the Summer sunlight. You see, she was merely a permanent inhabitant of Red-Brick City.

Devilled Scallops

THE following directions are for a quart of scallops: Clean as usual, drain and bring to the boiling point; after which they are to be drained once more and the liquor reserved. Reduce a third cup of butter to a cream, season it with a little teaspoonful of made mustard, a pinch only of cayenne, a teaspoonful of salt. Add to this two-thirds of a cup of the liquor that has been reserved and the scallops, which have been chopped. Let them stand thirty minutes, after which they are put in a baking dish, covered with crumbs and baked twenty minutes.

Ways to Win Beauty

By MARGARET HUBBARD AYER

HORACE FLETCHER, the famous dietitian, announced the other day that he was doing nicely, thank you, on a diet of potatoes and butter, thoroughly masticated, of course.

Now, I haven't a doubt that since this news got into print many hundreds of people either have started or are nobly living on potatoes for the rest of their days and solving the food problem in this easy manner, because nothing appals the people of a certain type so much as a complete change of diet advocated by any casual person.

Not that Mr. Fletcher is a casual person. Far from it. But he is living on potatoes as a test, and he has his life to his diet, while we have got to fit our diet to our needs and mode of living.

I know many women who will take a notion to try some kind of a diet and suddenly from everyday food to three meals consisting of some milk only or of vegetables, without thinking of consulting a doctor or diet specialist. They usually get very nervous, run down, and as suddenly go back to their old menu until they get another queer diet craze. Both changes are a shock to the system, to say the least, and are likely to be injurious.

Now that doesn't mean that the milk diet or the potato diet isn't all right, but it may not be the thing for you.

I know a great many vegetarians who thrive, and quite as many who are anemic, though they never admit it until they go back to meat eating. One thing is certain—if you are getting plenty of good, pure country air and are not working either brain and body hard you can experiment with a brand new diet and it won't hurt you.

But if you are living in town, especially if you are working hard and get only part of the sunlight, theatres, luncheon or business buildings allow you, don't get queer diet fad.

Don't try to live on milk unless you can stay at home and take care of yourself.

Study the things you eat in your ordinary bill of fare, compare how each thing agrees with you, and eliminate such foods as don't.

You will find that a much harder and much more profitable to cut out coffee. It makes your complexion yellow or to keep away from tea or candy, which you know are bad for you, than to splunge around boasting that you are on some fancy diet which you have prescribed for yourself.

If you are too fat, cut out meat—that is, meat offener than once a day—and drink just a little as you can.

If you are too thin, try chocolate instead of tea or coffee.

But study your own needs and don't overload your stomach. One thing you can learn of Mr. Fletcher, the arch-masticator.

Chew all your food, chew until it loses you. Then you will be chewing it thoroughly and not swallowing it whole as most of us do.

SHERLOCK HOLMES IN THE SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Conan Doyle's fascinating Sherlock Holmes mystery stories are now a regular feature of the Sunday AMERICAN.

The Ways of a Woman

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

WHEN a man fails in business his wife toils in public that he was too conscientious to succeed. What she says in private is sometimes different.

A woman who works downtown is apt to be pretty well satisfied with life, except on a windy day.

If a woman finds out ten things her husband was keeping from her, she guessed seven of them.

When women say they "understand the men," they mean they can't be fooled by any of their meannesses.

Every woman is of the secret opinion that if her husband could be some other woman's husband for just one week he would appreciate her more.

If a man compliments a pretty woman in the presence of his wife, she reproves him, and if his wife is not present it is the duty of the pretty woman to see that he is rebuked.

When there is a sudden scouring on the streets a woman's first fear is that some of her apparel is coming off.

If men were ideal husbands and wanted to hold their wives' hands, there would never be opportunity, because the hands are occupied with broom, baby, frying pan or needle if the women are the men's ideal wives.

It is a mother's opinion that a boy's father doesn't begin to enjoy him till the son has reached the age when the father stops helping around the house and grumbles because "that boy" doesn't do the work.

PRACTICAL OBESITY CURES.

Miss. Lina Cavalieri's beauty lecture in next Sunday's AMERICAN is a practical lesson on how to get thin. Not satisfied with mere general rules, she takes up the case of a woman who lost nineteen pounds in five weeks, and tells how she lost them.

Novel Card Parties

A WOMAN whose parties are sure to be a success, makes up for her lack of originality by originality. Her prizes for a card party can never be costly, so she makes them unusual.

At one affair the winner at each of the six tables was presented with a wicker basket of openwork design. This was lined with white tissue paper, tied with gay ribbon, which, opened, revealed five glasses of homemade orange marmalade.

Another time, at a Spring party, each winner received a small Japanned rimmed tray on which were set half a dozen tiny pots of well-grown cuttings from a rare old rosebush.

Again, there were sets of home-made place cards, painted on water color paper and folded ever to stand. The edges were gilt and each card had illuminated upon it an appropriate verse. Some of these sets were humorous; others quotations from historic epicures; one, an original series of witty comments on table manners; another had conundrums or acrostics on foods and table appointments.

A prize that gave much pleasure was a neatly decorated apple pie filled with beaten biscuit. Iced cakes would do as well.

An even more coveted prize were typewritten recipes of dishes long tested by the hostess and her ancestors. Each recipe was pasted to a card the size of a postal and the cards, numbered—were put in a heavy extension envelope used for filing. This was covered on the outside with gilt cards.

A useful set of prizes was half a dozen pads, eight by twelve inches, made of lavender cheesecloth and filled with dried lavender. The pads were made envelope shape, the flap fastened with a button, so they could easily be washed. They were dainty, but much appreciated, as evidenced by any one with a linen chest to be made fragrant.

On one occasion for an impromptu party when there was not much time to buy prizes, the hostess made half a dozen different kinds of candy. She filled six boxes with the mixtures and put on the top of each box a lace envelope, such as valentines come in, containing the recipe for each.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STATE STREET, Jan. 27—Closing: Stock market prices slumped to-day. The local opening was quite strong with gains in the first hour. When prices broke in New York most Boston coppers sagged in sympathy. There was heavy selling all along the line. The bears had their innings to-day. Some railroads and Industrials made low records for 1911. There was heavy liquidation in New York. All the leaders went down in price.

The market seemed to have no support. But the transactions were mostly room trading.

In the Boston market late prices were: Mayflower at 8¾, off ¾; Old Colony at 67¾, off ¾; Hancock at 53¾, unchanged; Indiana at 14¼, off ¼; Inspiration at 16⅝, unchanged; Alpenaia at 6¾, up ⅛; East Butte at 12¾, off ⅛.

East Boston Land closed at 1⅝, off ⅝.

The Boston Curb was broad and active, with prices irregular. Many inactive stocks were traded in. Beguie gained ⅜ of a point. Bohemia, Con. Arizona and Porcupine Northern were also higher.

Railroads and Industrials.

Atchison's last sale was at 105⅜, off ⅜ from yesterday's closing; Chesapeake & Ohio at 71¾, off 1½; St. Paul at 109⅝, off 1¼; Interborough at 17⅜, off ⅝; Lehigh Valley at 150½, off 2¾; Reading at 159¾, off 4¼; Union Pacific at 164½, off 2¾; Amalgamated at 62⅝, off 1⅜; Steel at 70⅝, off 1⅝; Amer. Sugar at 117⅝, up ⅜; Steel at 64⅝, off 1⅝.

Bear Drive on Lehigh Valley.

The New York market took a turn downward a few minutes after the opening and before the first hour had passed the bears had driven the list to the lowest point of the day. Lehigh Valley was the target and was largely supplied on sale by specialists. A line of 5000 shares started. Then Union Pacific was unloaded and went down steadily. Steel common was next. Then came selling. New York Central was among the declining stocks. American Tobacco went down 10 points before the session closed, a loss of 9 points from the high record made yesterday. Prices at the opening sales of sixteen leading stocks ran 1 point below closing prices yesterday.

London Stock Market Wobbles.

The securities exhibit today, having the effect of a crowd. Gilt edged securities were firm, but there was realizing sales by home dealers. Americanes were unsettled. There was selling of Canadian Pacific. Foreign rubbers were steady. Mining shares and rubbers were dull.

The Continental bourses closed quiet.

Have You Ever Wanted to Know what happened in some given year in American history, viz., the first year of Lincoln's administration, when every week was crowded with big events? The usual reference work to which you would turn confuses the events and dates you are seeking in a mass of description or irrelevant matter. But here is a HISTORY built upon a NEW PLAN. It throws forward the prominent things in BOLD TYPE, tracing out the important things year by year, so that you can follow them at a glance. It is "HISTORY MADE VISIBLE." And, best of all, a beautiful color chart shows the whole march of events in a single page, making a fascinating study. This chart extends 43 inches and shows the rise and progress of each State in the Union.

WEEK'S WINNERS NAMED SUNDAY

The winners for the first week in the Country Boy Contest of the AMERICAN will be announced in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

The weekly prizes and the grand prizes in this contest include $7a in gold and theatre boxes and seats.

The Country Boy Editor received replies from all over New England for the first week of this contest. The replies are in answer to the question: "Which boy has the greater natural opportunity for success in life, the city boy or the country boy?"

This contest was suggested by the comedy by Edgar Selwyn, "The Country Boy," now running at the Park Theatre.

To Run Four Weeks.

The contest will run four weeks.

Answers to the questions should be limited to one hundred and fifty words. Write on one side of the paper only. Sign your name and full address.

Each reply should contain one good example, taken from life, to show that the writer is qualified by reason of his own personal achievement of some successful idea.

There will be a series of weekly prizes and a series of grand prizes at the end of the contest. The weekly prizes, awarded at the end of each week of the contest, will be: First, $10 in gold; second, $5 in gold; third, $3 in gold; fourth, box seats at the Park Theatre, good for Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday during the announcement of the award; fifth, pair of seats for the Country Boy on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday.

There will be four sets of weekly prizes, one set for each of the four weeks of the contest. At the end of the contest the grand prizes will be awarded. The grand prizes are: First, $20 in gold; second, $10 in gold; third, $5 in gold; fourth, box seats, seats for "The Country Boy."

Address letters to Country Boy Editor, Boston AMERICAN, No. 82 Summer street, Boston.

Among the first week's answers in the Country Boy question are the following:

"God Made the Country."

The country boy must take first place,
Because he has the health and strength
That country living grants.
New health is worth, and life to life's dear
The wealthy look hard.
The country boy has always shown
That he can set his part.

Take Thomas Alva Edison:
Is not better person known—
If he had been a city boy,
Could he have lived his song?
Would all the things that he has done
Be lireless energy
Been given to the world to use,
To make it bear and see?

The country air produces vigor
To look like, mind and will.
If the city is for living,
To win success in life.
GEORGE EDGAR FRYE.
No. 15 Sycamore street, Somerville, Mass.

Best Chance for City Boy.

Editor AMERICAN:

I think the city boy has the greater natural opportunity for success in life, in many ways.

First, he has better education in the city than he would have in the country. One may say that the country has good health, good hours, good habits, the knowledge of the value of a dollar, the meaning of hard work, these things all being of more importance in the country world than the best education. Knowing these things the big merchant or wholesaler is usually in favor of taking the country boy, though the country boy decide on a profession where the superior educator of the city boy might be against him, the same qualities of perseverance, stick to it, backed by a sound constitution, will win. The Facts About the Lawrence Strike

Governor Foss has recommended to the Massachusetts Legislature an investigation, by a special legislative committee, of the cause for the present strike in the city of Lawrence and of the facts of public interest which relate to this serious situation in Lawrence. There are some facts, however, which affect this strike that need no investigation, but are known of all men.

We know that the manufacturers involved in this unfortunate situation are men who have enjoyed the special benefits of our protective tariff system.

We know that the particular industry in which they are engaged has been the most notoriously and scandalously protected of all our American industries and in the last Payne-Aldrich bill, the schedule under which the amount of protection given to woolen manufacturers was defined, earned the name of the "Iniquitous Schedule K"; this schedule levied a duty so high that even President Taft, who signed the bill, declared it to be indefensible.

We know that the indignation of the country after the passage of the Payne-Aldrich bill was particularly directed against the protection given to woolen manufacturers under Schedule K and that indignation cost the overthrow of the Republican party, and will probably cost President Taft his re-election.

We know that protection to woolen manufacturing has always been sought by the mill owners upon the ground that the American people ought to consent to be taxed in order that American workingmen may not be obliged to compete with cheap foreign labor.

We know that these manufacturers have for years asked the American people to pay twice as much for their woolen clothes as the Canadian or the English pay, in order that the American workingmen in the woolen mills may not be obliged to compete with the workingmen of Europe, who know nothing about our ways of living and who can get along on far less than American workingmen find necessary for existence.

We know that the Tariff Commission appointed by President Taft has reported, what the more intelligent of the community knew for years, that in the industries receiving highest protection, American workingmen were receiving the lowest wages.

We know that by results, protection protects, not the workingmen, but the manufacturers, and exposes the workingmen to a greater peril than competition with the goods manufactured by foreign labor.

We know that under protection they are compelled to face competition with European labor and its low standards of living at the very doors of the factories by that foreign labor in person, brought into this country in violation of either the letter or the spirit of our contract labor laws.

We know that the enormous profits which the protective tariff enables the manufacturers to make during favorable years are distributed among them without any dividing with the workingmen and that, when the lean period comes, these manufacturers sit back on their swollen profits, suffering nothing while putting the burden of the lean year upon the workingmen.

We know that those who permit workingmen and women to receive wages of five, six and seven dollars a week and thus to support families, are permitting their workingmen to fall into a condition which they would not permit in their machinery or their horses. If ill treatment of the machinery caused it to deteriorate as much as insufficient wages cause labor to deteriorate, that treatment of the machinery would cease.

We know that it is because the supply of these inexperienced, unskilled men can be ever renewed that it is treated with less consideration than a machine or a horse.

Whatever facts may be found by a legislative investigation, the people of Massachusetts may at least understand what a sad farce it is to urge a protective tariff as a benefit to American workingmen.

Massachusetts is not benefited by the presence of an industry which draws into our community men whose wages are below the standards of American workingmen.

These foreigners are good men and women, and now that they are here we must help them up to our standard of living and not permit ourselves to be dragged down to theirs.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

WHY ARE THE RICH PROUD?

Editor AMERICAN:

I have read with interest your excellent editorial under the heading: "Why Are the Rich Proud?"—in which you give our esteemed American citizens Messrs. Rockefeller, Morgan and Pearsons due credit for their efforts in doing good for their fellow man.

You voice the sentiment of your legion of readers in bestowing praise for the good these benefactors are accomplishing—not only by their large donations of wealth, but by their example of right-living, which is of inestimable value.

While economic questions are in process of adjustment, it ill becomes the people of the press to withhold commiuns of praise from those who are doing so much for the betterment of mankind—far better to give some applause to those deserving before their last appearance in life's drama.

These men no doubt take great pride in living honorably, but two, at least, could hardly be called proud men. Their mental capacity is off sufficient scope to realize how insignificant and helpless and transient we all are—to be proud. E. R.

EDITORIAL EDUCATION

Editor AMERICAN:

As a teacher of some twenty years' experience I read with great pleasure your editorial on "Give Your Children the Happiness of Real Work." This editorial in advanced thinking was most remarkable. I am really amazed that anyone not a teacher could so carefully delineate the educational changes which are necessary before our schools can be improved. "The public school system in this country is submerged under a mass of wretched traditions. I congratulate you upon your editorial, and I wish that you would assist some of the men behind the guns who would like to bring forward such ideas.

Is There a Strike at Lawrence?

John Golden, You Will Remember, Called the Disturbance a "Social Protest." Richard Washburn Child Says Mr. Golden is Quite Right About It. Mr. Child Is Sorry There Isn't a Strike!

Two Massachusetts authorities, who might well be called national authorities, have now said to the Sunday AMERICAN that the "strike" at Lawrence is not a strike at all!

John Golden of Fall River, president of the International Union of Textile Workers of America, said in an article in last Sunday's AMERICAN that the disturbance at Lawrence is a "social protest." That is, a protest by thousands of unorganized workers against existing social conditions.

Now comes Mr. Richard Washburn Child, the distinguished young author, to say in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN that John Golden is quite right about it.

"It is too bad," Mr. Child says, "that this IS a social protest and not a strike, a fact made clear by John Golden of Fall River in the last issue of the Sunday AMERICAN.

"If it were a strike, we would be able to come to a conclusion in a very interesting issue, but as it is not a strike, I suppose we ought to draw from it SOME CONCLUSIONS AS TO WHAT IS BEHIND IT."

And in the most important politico-economic contribution to the literature of Lawrence Mr. Child proceeds to draw his "conclusions."

Richard Washburn Child is one of the best known members of the younger set in American letters. His "Jim Hand" stories are still numbered among the best sellers. His shorter stories are in demand in the editorial offices of the best magazines. His intelligent and fearless expose of "The Making of 'K'" made a whole nation think on the iniquities of the Payne-Aldrich tariff.

In to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN Mr. Child will discuss "The City Schedule 'K'". He approaches his story with no brief for either side. He says some things which will displease Joseph J. Ettor and William D. Haywood. We print them because this is Mr. Child's article and because, always and forever, this newspaper stands for free speech.

But Mr. Child says other things which will make the mill-owners squirm. We print these, too, and for the same reason. Mr. Child knows "K" and the makers thereof. He knows Lawrence. He knows history. He knows his people, and if you care anything for our advice it is first to be sure of your copy of the Sunday AMERICAN and then to turn, FIRST, to the Lawrence story by Richard Washburn Child.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About Entertaining Dukes

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I WAS reeding in the paper, sed Ma, that the Duke of Connaught got lost away from his crowd for a whole hour in New York the uther day. Iseent that kind of misterious?

Not at all, sed Pa, not at all. It is just a good joak. The Duke simply docked away from the crowd. He gaiv them all the slip.

Where in the world do you suppoas he went? sed Ma.

Well, sed Pa, I will tell you. It was this way. But beefore I go any farther, sed Pa, I must aware you to complete confidence. You will not reveel a word of what I am about to say to you reegarding this matter?

I will not, sed Ma. Or pos, sether, Bobbie, Pa asked me. No, Pa, I sed, I won't say a word.

Very well, sed Pa, the facks in the case are these. You see, the Duke & me was old pals in the old days. We shot big game together. Pa sed, & together we was entertained in all the finest salons of the continent.

Dere, dere, sed Ma, I never thought for a minnit that you had been in a salon. It is barely possibel, sed Ma, that you mite have ventured into a saloon now & then, but I dident think you cared for salons.

Nevertheless, Pa sed, the Duke & I was old time pals, & he sent me a litte note the other day telling me that he was tired of beeing bowed to & advied. It wud be a grand thing, he told me, sed Pa, if you cud knock over to New York & have a quiet gaim of bilyards with me, & so, sed Pa, I did & me & the Duke played for a hour. Nobody knew him, Pa sed, beekaus he went incognito, but as everybody there knew me it made a pritty good average. The Duke wud have stayed a litte longer, Pa sed, but I beat him three gaims in a row & sent him to the cashier so regular that he began to yawn, sed Pa. It dosent matter what stashun in life a man beelongs to, sed Pa, or wether he is rich or poor, I have always noticed that wen he beegins to loss regular he looks toward the door & yawns. Wether you are a Duke or a dog, sed Pa, you dount want to be all the time sitting kicked in the shins.

All the time Pa was talking Ma was looking him cever kind of careful. Pa can talk pritty fast, but Ma can always look at him about ten words farther than what he is saying, Ma has very good eyes.

& so, Ma sed, that is pure alibi for beeing over to New York as long as you were. I suspected as much. & you think that little Bobbie & me are idiots enuff to beeleeve that a regular duke wud go anywere & play bilyards with you? Enny, enny, and Ma, don't make me laff to-day. I have a split lip, as the comeedians say.

Then Pa got mad & went in his room, & after he had went Ma told me nevver to say to my wife, if I ever git one, that I went som place ware I dident go.

But I am going to jest the saim.
